Fast forward for Charlie

Charlie Higson is best known for his work on The Fast Show, in which his characters include Ralph, the repressed landowner devoted to his old Irish retainer, Ted, and Swiss Toni, the second-hand car salesman with delusions of sexual know-how. But Charlie is just as active behind the camera, and is currently both directing and producing the second series of Randall & Hopkirk (Deceased), starring Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer.

The first series, which airs on UK Gold this month, had a mixed critical reception. 'I wasn't too disheartened,' he says. 'Some people were ecstatic about it, others weren't sure. But it got good viewing figures, around 8.5m, and did very well with families, as we had hoped it would. Also, ITV scheduled Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? against it, and Stars in their Eyes, so they took it very seriously, which was flattering.'

Randall and Hopkirk were originally played by Mike Pratt and Kenneth Cope, back in 1969. I ask Charlie how it came to be revived? 'Working Title TV, part of Polygram, was looking at a few of the old ITC shows now owned by Polygram,' he explains. 'They thought Department S and The Champions were too kitsch, but Randall & Hopkirk had a strong idea. It was going to be much darker – Cracker meets The X-Files. But Vic and Bob heard about the project ... so the direction changed somewhat.'

Charlie still finds time for The Fast Show. Three 40-minute specials are due to be screened this Christmas. 'I think that'll be the end of it in TV form,' says Charlie. 'But we'd like to do a film, and maybe a sitcom spin-off. I quite like the idea of a sitcom set in a car showroom, starring Swiss Toni.'

Randall & Hopkirk (Deceased), UK Gold, Saturdays from 4th, 9.00pm

Liza minds her Ps and Qs

Liza Tarbuck, improbably, is the new Bob Holness. The ebullient former presenter of The Big Breakfast is to host a new version of the quiz show Blockbusters, which first appeared, with Holness in the chair, back in 1983. When Liza quit The Big Breakfast – to general wailing and gnashing of teeth – she said she was going back to acting. So how does Blockbusters fit in? 'I think you can do both,' she says. 'I did get some great acting offers. But then I was offered Blockbusters and I thought, "Oooh, can I squeeze that in as well?" After all, there aren't many quiz shows presented by women, and I wanted to have a go. Although, I'm afraid I'll find it very hard not to be rude every time someone says, "Can I have a P, please?"'

Liza still misses The Big Breakfast, although not the excruciating hours. 'I don't miss going to bed at 8.00pm. I'd phone my young nephew and say, "Why aren't you in bed yet?" And he'd say, "Why aren't you in bed?" Cheeky thing. But I do miss old Chatty Hole [her nickname for co-presenter Johnny Vaughan]. So I try to go round to his place most Saturdays, mainly because my boyfriend lives there. My boyfriend is his dog, Harvey. He had me pinned to the wall for ten minutes last week.'

Liza times a gag impeccably – unsurprising given that her father is comedian Jimmy Tarbuck. 'But I was completely steered away from show business as a kid,' she tells me. 'Dad kept our private life private. We knew that he did things other dads didn't do. When we had mates round on a Saturday, two parents and an uncle would come to pick them up, because they thought they might see Dad. That sort of thing helps you to suss out people very quickly. Dad can do it in five minutes and I've inherited it.'

Know the voice, can't place the face ...

Nancy Cartwright is a fortysomething mother of two living in Southern California. In this respect, she's like thousands of other women. In one respect, however, she is like nobody else on Earth. For Nancy has an unusual alter ego, an unruly boy of 10 with bug eyes and yellow skin.

And more than once in the course of our transatlantic telephone conversation she rather disconcertingly breaks into his voice. Which gives me an idea. Nancy seems like a good sort, so would she oblige me by talking in the voice of her alter ego to my seven-year-old daughter? She says she would be happy to. So I yell downstairs to my daughter. 'Eleanor, come here a second! Bart Simpson's on the phone for you!'

Nancy was 18 when she decided that she wasn't going to be a conventional actress, she was going to do cartoon voices. 'I just felt that I wasn't pretty enough, and I knew that the competition was fierce,' she explains. 'And yet the irony is that I ended up in a more exclusive area of the industry. It is highly lucrative and the hours are very comfortable.'

She had no inkling, of course, when she landed the voice of Bart Simpson for a series of short segments on The Tracey Ullman Show, that he would become a global icon. In fact she thought that the fee – around $300 – was hardly worth the bother. But fortunately she decided to do it, and now earns a reported $50,000 per episode. Moreover, she has acquired great street cred for her children, Jack, nine, and Lucy, ten. 'I'm so popular at their school. When we moved into this neighbourhood, four years ago, kids came up to me all the time and said, "Do Bart, do Bart!" Eventually I'd have to be pretty firm with them, and say, "OK, I'm going to be a mom right now."'

Nancy is not widely recognised though. It must be satisfying, I venture, to have achieved worldwide fame through her voice rather than her face. 'Oh sure, I have my cake and I'm eating it,' she says. 'That was my concern about writing my book (My Life as a 10-year-old Boy, published by Bloomsbury on 9 November, priced £12.99), that I might be blowing my anonymity. But I don't think it will change things too much. Besides, it is nice to get some recognition. For instance, we had such a great time when we came to Britain [in September, to mark The Simpsons' 10th birthday]. That was one of the events of my life. You guys are nuts about The Simpsons, more so than in America.' Why is that, does she think? 'Well, you have more people crammed into a smaller space. But it's more than that. I hate to put down my country, but I think that you are culturally more astute.' Amen to that.

Nancy Cartwright will be discussing her book on The Book Show, Sky News, Sunday 19th, 11.30am

A LEAGUE OF THEIR OWN

A new series of Renford Rejects kicks off early next year – and the hit soccer sitcom has been boosted by a new signing

SINCE it first trotted onto the hallowed TV turf of Nickelodeon in 1998, Renford Rejects, the kids' soccer sitcom that follows the misadventures of a hopeless five-a-side team, has gained rave reviews, a Bafta nomination and an army of enthusiastic fans. With the stars currently training for the fourth series, which is set to kick off in February, Cable Guide decided to drop in at Graceland, the café that serves as the players' off-pitch base, to get the low-down on what to expect. We were promised the sort of hilarious storylines we've come to love, more guest appearances by top football stars (the day we visited, West Ham goalkeeper Shaka Hislop was demonstrating a deft sense of comic timing in his cameo), as well as a new cast signing – Mohammad George, as 'cool dude' player-manager Dennis.

Its long, uninterrupted takes and mobile camerawork give Renford Rejects a distinctive style and visual pedigree that elevates it way above many children's series. Mohammad maintains the show is unlike any he's worked on. The newcomer has notched up some impressive stage credits, including performing an excerpt from Bugsy Malone before the Queen in a Children's Royal Variety Performance and appearing in a football-themed play with Rejects co-star Martin Delaney (aka team captain, Jason), but admits he was surprised to be drawing on that experience for the show.

'This is more like theatre,' he says. 'It's more fluid. A scene could go on for three or four minutes with no cuts. I found it hard to get used to at first – especially when you mess up a scene right at the end. It's like, "Sorry, guys," and you have to start all over again.'

The programme-makers' insistence on using genuine locations, centring on a residential street in north west London, means that Rejects avoids the artificial, studio-bound look that afflicts many British series. But this also poses problems for the cast and crew. 'It's really hectic on this street,' admits Mohammad, 'because you can't stop the traffic. So when there are a lot of cars beeping their horns, you have to cut and go again. The shot's ruined and it's not even our fault.'

These irritations aside, everyone agrees the location is perfect. The production revolves around Graceland, a real café that is leased all year long, the Renford pitch is about five minutes away and the young stars even lodge together close by.

But despite the location's home-away-from-home feel, the cast are still looking forward to jetting off to Sardinia for the filming of three episodes – the first time the show has left the comfortingly familiar surroundings of 'Renford' for foreign climes.

'Although, we did once go to Cobham for a week,' laughs Tom Weller, who plays series bully Terry Stoker. 'That was hell. We were staying in shacks and there were a lot of spiders!'

● Tom and Jerry returns to Cartoon Network in the New Year with the first new episode for three decades. The constantly warring duo's original adventures were first seen in cinemas in 1940. The cat and mouse team went on to scoop seven Academy Awards over the years, and even appeared in the Hollywood musicals Invitation to the Dance and Dangerous When Wet, while Jerry made a solo cameo in Anchors Aweigh.

● Ticket to Ride on UK Horizons, 31 December, is a documentary following volunteers from the War Child charity on a fundraising trip across America in a 1958 red London bus. Ticket to Ride features Neil Morrissey, who is the patron of the charity.

● Sky News will increase its global news coverage in the New Year, with the channel's foreign correspondents being reshuffled. Washington correspondent Stuart Ramsay is moving to Sky's new bureau in Johannesburg. At present, Stuart is involved in the US presidential election coverage. (See feature, pages 18-19.)

● The new series of Top Gear GTi will start on UK Horizons in December, contrary to what was printed in last month's Cable Guide.

THE STRE

They last shared the screen 12 years ago as 'Dirty' Den and Angie in EastEnders. Now Leslie Grantham and Anita Dobson reunite for The Stretch. Interviews: Pauline McLeod

THE FOCUS is on rage, revenge and greed in Sky One's hard-hitting new drama The Stretch. But what makes it unmissable TV is that it reunites the dynamic acting partnership of Grantham and Dobson; 'Dirty' Den and Angie – the forever-feuding duo who ran the Queen Vic for three years.

And do they deliver! The old EastEnders chemistry is still as explosive, still as potent – although the Greenes, Terry (Grantham) and Sam (Dobson), make Den and Angie look like babes in the wood.

Career criminal Terry Greene loves his dear old mum, there's no doubt about that. Not so sure about the wife, though. So much betrayal on his part. Naturally, he'd do anything to keep his kids from harm. And he pays his taxes – admittedly, with counterfeit or laundered money!

However, Greene, wrongfully banged up for murder, is a family man at heart – although his take on family values can only be described as somewhat unusual. 'I've always done what I had to do to support this family. I know I've broken a few laws along the way but I've never hurt anyone who didn't deserve to be hurt,' reasons Tel, on his release from jail. Sam, his wife, listens with sullen disapproval (but, one suspects, also a sneaking admiration) as he sounds off about his money-making plans for the 'mother of all heroin deals'.

If the truth be known, Grantham was thrilled to be playing such a Machiavellian character and wanted to make Greene even tougher. James Cagney's Cody Jarrett in White Heat, a chap who could brutally assault your nerves with one homicidal glance, was the nutter running around his head when he was in script meetings with The Stretch writer, Stephen Leather.

'Cagney was in love with his mum,' explains the 53-year-old actor, 'but every now and then he'd get these headaches and ...! Greene has this picture of himself as the ideal, responsible family man but he's the one putting the drugs on the street, which is why I think he is a psychopath. He doesn't live in the real world.'

So wound up did he become in his character, that parts of one fight scene, filmed at Oxford Prison, can't be shown. 'We ended up cutting a lot out of one scene in the shower where Leslie is attacked by two other prisoners because it was just too brutal – way beyond what the script called for,' says Leather, who was only too happy to re-work his early draft after producer Paul Knight secured his dream cast.

'Originally it was the woman's story of how she takes over her husband's "business affairs" when he goes to prison and becomes the villainess. But there's no point in having these two particular actors in the piece and the only time they get together is during prison visiting hours.

'There is such an edge to them, such chemistry, it's quite uncanny to watch. But the weird thing is, it's not there until the cameras start rolling and then – boom – it's there immediately.'

Dobson confesses: 'I did worry about this so-called magic we had in EastEnders. What if it wasn't there any more? But it was. I don't know what it is, I don't think Leslie does either – we've never questioned it.'

Charming, low-key, all traces of Stepney edited out of her classless accent, Dobson didn't have to look far to 'find' Sam. 'You see them in East End pubs, these women who are the power behind the throne, very much in control of their worse halves – sharp-suited, very blonde, very hard-looking, the odd couple of words spoken here and there. You would not want to mess with them.'

And strangely enough, the 51-year-old actress didn't have to dig deep into her own East End roots to dredge up on-screen anger. 'I think kids who are born on the streets, who don't have money, who don't have privileges, have to fight for everything they get – in my case, to get someone to understand what drama school was – and have quite a lot of rage in-built.

'I know I can speak quite nicely because I've learned how to, how to sit and have a cup of tea and not embarrass myself and now I know which knife and fork to use. Those memories are part of my psyche. I mean, that's who I am.'

After they quit EastEnders, she and Grantham had 'a sort of unspoken agreement' that unless it was something with impact, they wouldn't work together again. And The Stretch certainly has plenty of impact. 'I think for Leslie to play someone that close to home, a guy who has been inside, was something he was absolutely ready for. I think if we face up to our demons, it makes us stronger.'

Her equally charming co-star may or may not have demons raging within him, but if he does they are certainly not for public consumption. When he was 19, Grantham was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of a taxi driver in Germany where he was stationed in the army. He spent almost 12 years in jail.

'It's something I have to live with. I am the only person who knows what happened and so I am the one who carries that burden. But I deal with it in my own way and however callow and cruel that might sound to some people, I don't want to enter into a conversation about my past with anyone.' And that's all he will say. Subject closed.

But how was it being inside again, so to speak, in Oxford Prison? 'Well, at least I could get out at night,' he quips.

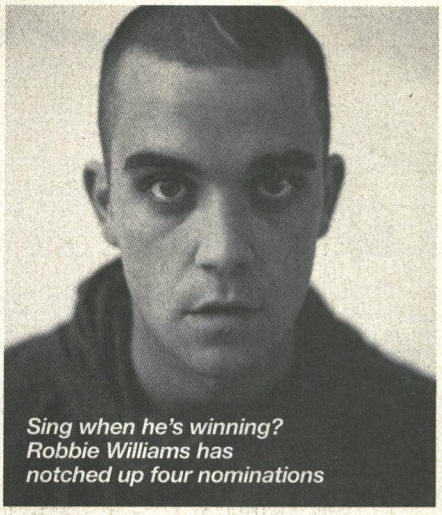
Songs for Europe

Around one billion people will be tuning into this month's MTV 2000 Europe Music Awards to see the rock world's biggest names battle for pole position. Nick Griffiths caught up with this year's host, hip-hop legend Wyclef Jean



Sing when he's winning? Robbie Williams has notched up four nominations

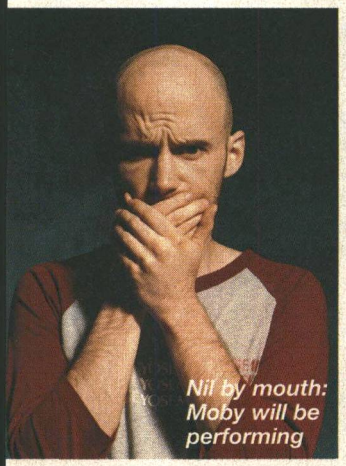
THIS month, the MTV 2000 Europe Music Awards airs live. Much hype has been generated in the lead up to the big event. Rewind six weeks, back to earliest October, and a press conference to reveal the host, nominees and guest presenters: 'You're a bit early,' says an MTV press officer at London's swanky Mayfair Club. 'But the invite said 10.30am.'

'It's not 10.30am,' he replies, helpfully proffering his watch upside-down. No, it's 10.26am. Clearly, there is no such thing as 'fashionably early' in music circles. Anything MTV does is big news. Since the channel broadcasts globally, it can attract all the top acts. Last year's MTV 1999 Europe Music Awards, in Dublin, featured live performances by Britney Spears, Whitney Houston, Mariah Carey and Mick Jagger. Some 300 million households tuned in to the event; two million votes were cast via the internet alone; 400 litres of vodka were consumed at the after-show party.



Nil by mouth: Moby will be performing

This year's ceremony takes place in Stockholm. 'We're bringing the show to Sweden in recognition of its legendary contribution to the popular music scene,' says MTV Europe president Brent Hansen. Presumably he means Abba.

Also present at the press conference is The Fugees founder, now a solo artist, Wyclef Jean, who will host. Equally present is Jean's hulk of a bodyguard with an understated line in small talk. Jean speaks, immediately lightening the tone: he wants to thank MTV for 'the first-class ticket on British Airways. I've come to Europe a lot of times. They always put me in business class.'

The nominees (chosen by committee), for whom viewers can vote, are announced. There are 21 awards, including the usual Best Male and Best Female categories, and for artists from seven European regions. Sonique and Robbie Williams top the nominations table with four each. Close behind are Bon Jovi, Britney Spears, Mel C, Travis and Madonna. The Spice Girls, Moby, Backstreet Boys, Robbie Williams and U2 will be performing live.

Following the conference, a chance to interview the host. His first ever award was for the 40-yard dash, back when yards were fashionable; his favourite host is Roseanne; and he describes himself as 'a laid-back cat'.

'The Wyclef music reaches the whole world, so I thought it was important to put the face with the music,' he explains. A billion viewers may watch his antics. What if he messes up? 'Messin' up is a state of mind. If you gonna fall, just fall. I plan to mess up a lot, that's what makes it fun.'

Wyclef Jean's most embarrassing moment on-stage so far was when he succumbed to a bout of diarrhoea while performing with The Fugees in 1995. Fortunately, he says, 'The jeans I was wearing were dark blue.'

Will the bodyguard be accompanying him to Stockholm? 'Yeah, man, Beast is everywhere, just in case somebody in the crowd acts up.' How quickly could he take me out if I came at you with a banana? 'Nah,' says Jean, tracing a perfect arc over my head with an expensive shoe, 'I would take you out, man.'

GRACE and GLORY

Brenda Blethyn, one of Britain's best-loved actresses, is now the toast of Tinseltown, thanks to her role in Saving Grace. Interview: Garth Pearce

BRENDA BLETHYN has surprised herself. At the age of 54, she continues to do what she's always done: put in well-crafted performances, whether on the stage, British television or in small-budget movies. But here she is, a success in Hollywood.

It is the unlikeliest of situations. She has won two Oscar nominations in the last four years for her roles in Secrets & Lies and Little Voice. And now she has exercised the sort of power that her American admirers understand only too well, by delivering a box office success, with Saving Grace.

The film, made by Sky Pictures, became a surprise hit Stateside. In ten weeks, it grossed more than $10m. That's nothing, of course, compared to the big budget studio blockbusters, which regularly gross that in a few days. But for Brenda and Britain? It's a triumph.

The film has great warmth and humour. Brenda plays Grace Trevethen, who faces destitution following her husband's sudden death, because he has recklessly gambled away all their assets. She swaps growing prize-winning orchids for cultivating marijuana at her home in Cornwall. She then leaves the village to sell her produce to menacing underworld figures in London.

But the pressures of her new-found enterprise soon catch up with her, as gangsters, debt collectors and the police are in hot pursuit. Her only salvation seems to lie with the motley bunch of eccentric locals back in her village.

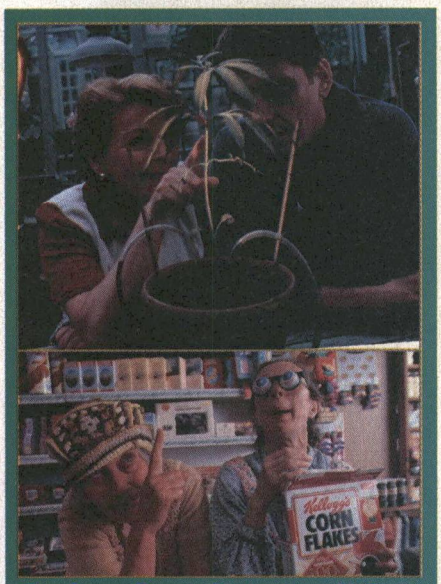
'Grace has led a sheltered life, with plenty of money,' says Brenda. 'She is content to grow orchids and give tea parties at her wonderful Cornish manor house. Then her husband's death changes everything. There are women all over Britain who have hardly worked a day in their lives. What happens if their world falls apart? How desperate would they become?'

Brenda, though, struggled for years before having any success. 'It makes me laugh,' she says. 'The first time I worked with a big Hollywood star was Farrah Fawcett, about ten years ago, in a mini-series called Poor Little Rich Girl.

'She was nice, surprisingly timid and very unsure of herself. After certain scenes, she would ask me, "How do you think that went?" And I would say, "Fine". But she would want another go at it and asked me to ask the director for another take. I said, "He won't listen to me." It was an interesting insight into how things can be.'

Brenda leads a low-key life in England with her partner Michael Mayhew, the art director at the National Theatre.

'He makes me laugh – and he always has,' she says. 'We met shortly after I started at the National in 1975. I am in awe of him, really. He is in a very demanding job and is superb at what he does. Whenever I'm away from home, I miss him like mad.



Top: Grace (Brenda Blethyn) and Matthew (Craig Ferguson) tend their crop. Bottom: The eccentric Margaret (Phyllida Law) and Diana (Linda Kerr Scott)

'We have never married, because we get on fine just the way we are,' says Brenda. 'We have a good relationship and why mend something that isn't broken?'

Brenda had a short-lived marriage 30 years ago, the result of a relationship that started in front of the footlights of the British Rail Amateur Dramatic Society.

She had grown up in Ramsgate, Kent, the youngest of nine. Her father was an engineer for the local council and her mother did part-time cleaning jobs. 'I am from a working-class background, but never really based my characters on people I knew,' she says. 'It does not really bother me that I am pigeon-holed in this way. If that's the way I am remembered, then so be it. If I have given some enjoyment, that's the most important thing.'

Brenda, known by many for her role as the cricket widow in the television comedy series Outside Edge, made her Hollywood breakthrough eight years ago in A River Runs Through It. She starred alongside Brad Pitt in the film directed by her screen idol Robert Redford.

'I was so nervous before I met him,' she says. 'After all, he was Robert Redford. He was impressive, in that he listened to everyone's opinion. He did not always follow that opinion, but he was a great listener. That's when I started to think that Hollywood stars are there because of a reason.

'They work exceptionally hard and have a style all of their own. They know the system and how to play it. Most of them have worked out what they are doing, when I always think that most of us here in Britain don't really know at all.

'We might have the talent, but we don't have the system. Look at people like Timothy Spall, who I worked with on Secrets & Lies. He would be a big star if he was in America.'

She's been travelling the world with her films: Australia with In The Winter Dark; California with Music From Another Room; and Las Vegas with Julie Walters for Girl's Night. 'It was a true pleasure working with Julie,' she recalls. 'We would giggle so much that we would have to have our make-up repaired before each scene. Then there was Michael Caine in Little Voice. What a star. He deserved an Oscar for that, so I'm so glad he got one for The Cider House Rules.'

And what of the future? 'Now, I feel as if anything can happen,' she says. 'I have been around a long time and am really enjoying the interest that's being shown in my film career. It just goes to prove, it's never too late to change your life.'

Reality rocks

Brighton is famous for its pebbled beaches and wild nightlife – now its inhabitants are about to enter the public gaze in a new docu-soap, from the producers of Big Brother! Jane Oddy met some of the 'cast' of the Sussex seaside town. Photography: Simon Rowe

SMALL but perfectly formed, seaside resort Brighton is a mecca for clubbers and out-of-towners looking for a groovy way to spend a weekend.

The town finds itself under the microscope as the subject of the new docu-soap Brighton Rocks, which starts on Living this month.

Cameras follow cabaret performers, designers, DJs, club promoters and entrepreneurs as they go about their business in one of the most popular seaside resorts in Britain.

But the fast-paced show, from the producers behind the television phenomenon Big Brother, reveals there is a lot more to Brighton than fish and chips, the pier and sticks of rock.

The Brighton Rocks crew tails an assortment of quirky characters, including busty Page Three model Emma Macallister, and Martin Webb, who owns one of the town's most popular gyms and is Brighton's version of Richard Branson.

His sassy blonde gym manager Rachel Vaughan looks set to become one of the main stars of the show and says she feels like a natural with the crew around.

'After three months I forgot they were there sometimes, which was a bit worrying,' she says.

The 29-year-old fitness fanatic has to battle against the clock to redecorate the gym in time for a big opening night, a gladiator-themed bash where drunken gym trainer Jim ends up showing punters what he really has to offer under his Roman toga.

Rachel, who runs marathons in her spare time, admits that she hasn't seen any of the footage of the soap even though the cameras were following her all summer.

A star is born: out-going Brighton gym manager Rachel Vaughan

'I'm particularly dreading seeing what kind of state I was the night of the party. I was pretty trolleyed!' she laughs.

'I haven't got a boyfriend at the moment, and I'm almost grateful because it would have been tough having a relationship on national television.'

She admits that she had a few sunbed sessions when she knew she had been chosen to be a regular in the show, and producers were so impressed with her extrovert style they asked her to interview Boy George when he was a guest DJ at Brighton's most popular night spot, Zap.

'But it was four in the morning,' Rachel says, 'so I don't think it was the best one he'd ever had!'

But unlike her Big Brother counterparts, Rachel has no desire to become a TV celebrity: 'I'm so happy working in the sports industry, it's not like a job to me. I'm trying to persuade my boss Martin to open a Riptide gym in my hometown of Truro in Cornwall,' she laughs.

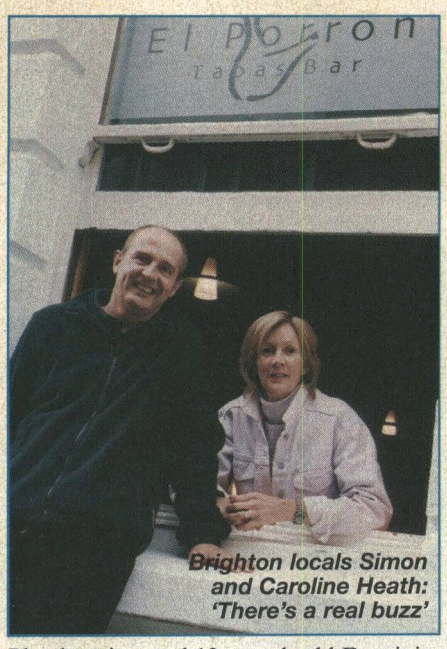
As for watching docu-soaps, Rachel confesses she never tunes in to any of them and can't understand the appetite for them: 'I'm too busy training and seeing my friends to watch TV! It's hardly normal anyway – it's pretty staged and unnatural.'

Rachel says the best things about living in Brighton are the friendly atmosphere and the frenetic social life – several of the characters featured in the series are starting up new businesses related to eating out and clubbing.

Former estate agent Simon Heath and wife Caroline, a former air stewardess, have become mini property tycoons in the town and are developing a disused Art Deco public toilet on the Steine behind the pier into a funky new bar which they plan to open on New Year's Eve: 'The producers "discovered" me,' Simon says. 'They were a bit fascinated by what we were doing with this old loo!'

With his property knowledge and 41-year-old Caroline's imaginative culinary ideas, the couple already own thriving businesses in The Lanes area: a trendy coffee bar called Coffee Chaos, and a Spanish tapas bar called El Porrón.

The dynamic couple feature heavily in the series, as do their two children,



Brighton locals Simon and Caroline Heath: 'There's a real buzz'

Phoebe, nine, and 12-month-old Dominic.

Brighton born and bred, 45-year-old Simon is well known in his hometown and admits that Brighton possesses a seductive quality that pulls him back despite attempts to move away.

'There are so many opportunities here and there's a real buzz. I may be over 40 and have two kids but I still go clubbing down here and I don't feel out of place. The weather is great too.'

He says he can fully understand the national obsession with docu-soaps but dismisses it as voyeuristic. 'People are basically nosy – we all are – and these kind of shows give us permission to draw back the curtain and have a good look inside! Normal soaps about day-to-day life – this is just a bit more factual.'

TOP FIVE DOCU-SOAPS

SYLVANIA WATERS

Brassy Noeline Donaher and her nouveau riche family launched the docu-soap genre. The Donahers incensed Australia with their foul-mouthed drunken antics, but the series was a hit when it was screened in Britain seven years ago.

PADDINGTON GREEN

Set in W2, this successful docu-soap spawned a star in the unlikely form of transsexual Jackie McAuliffe, who worked as a prostitute on Edgware Road. Now in its fourth series, Paddington Green has an all-new 'cast'.

AIRPORT

Aeroflot's camp supervisor Jeremy Spake launched a new career as a TV presenter, after appearing in this BBC series about Heathrow Airport. He now presents The Toughest Job in Britain.

CASTAWAY 2000

As a 'social experiment', a group of adults and children were left on the remote island of Taransay in the outer Hebrides to form a community. BBC viewers have been getting regular updates on their progress and a full series screens early in 2001.

BIG BROTHER

Described as 'the lowest common denominator of voyeuristic TV', this proved the most successful of them all. Millions of Channel 4 viewers tuned in to watch the compelling antics of ten housemates thrown together, with cameras watching their every move, 24 hours a day.

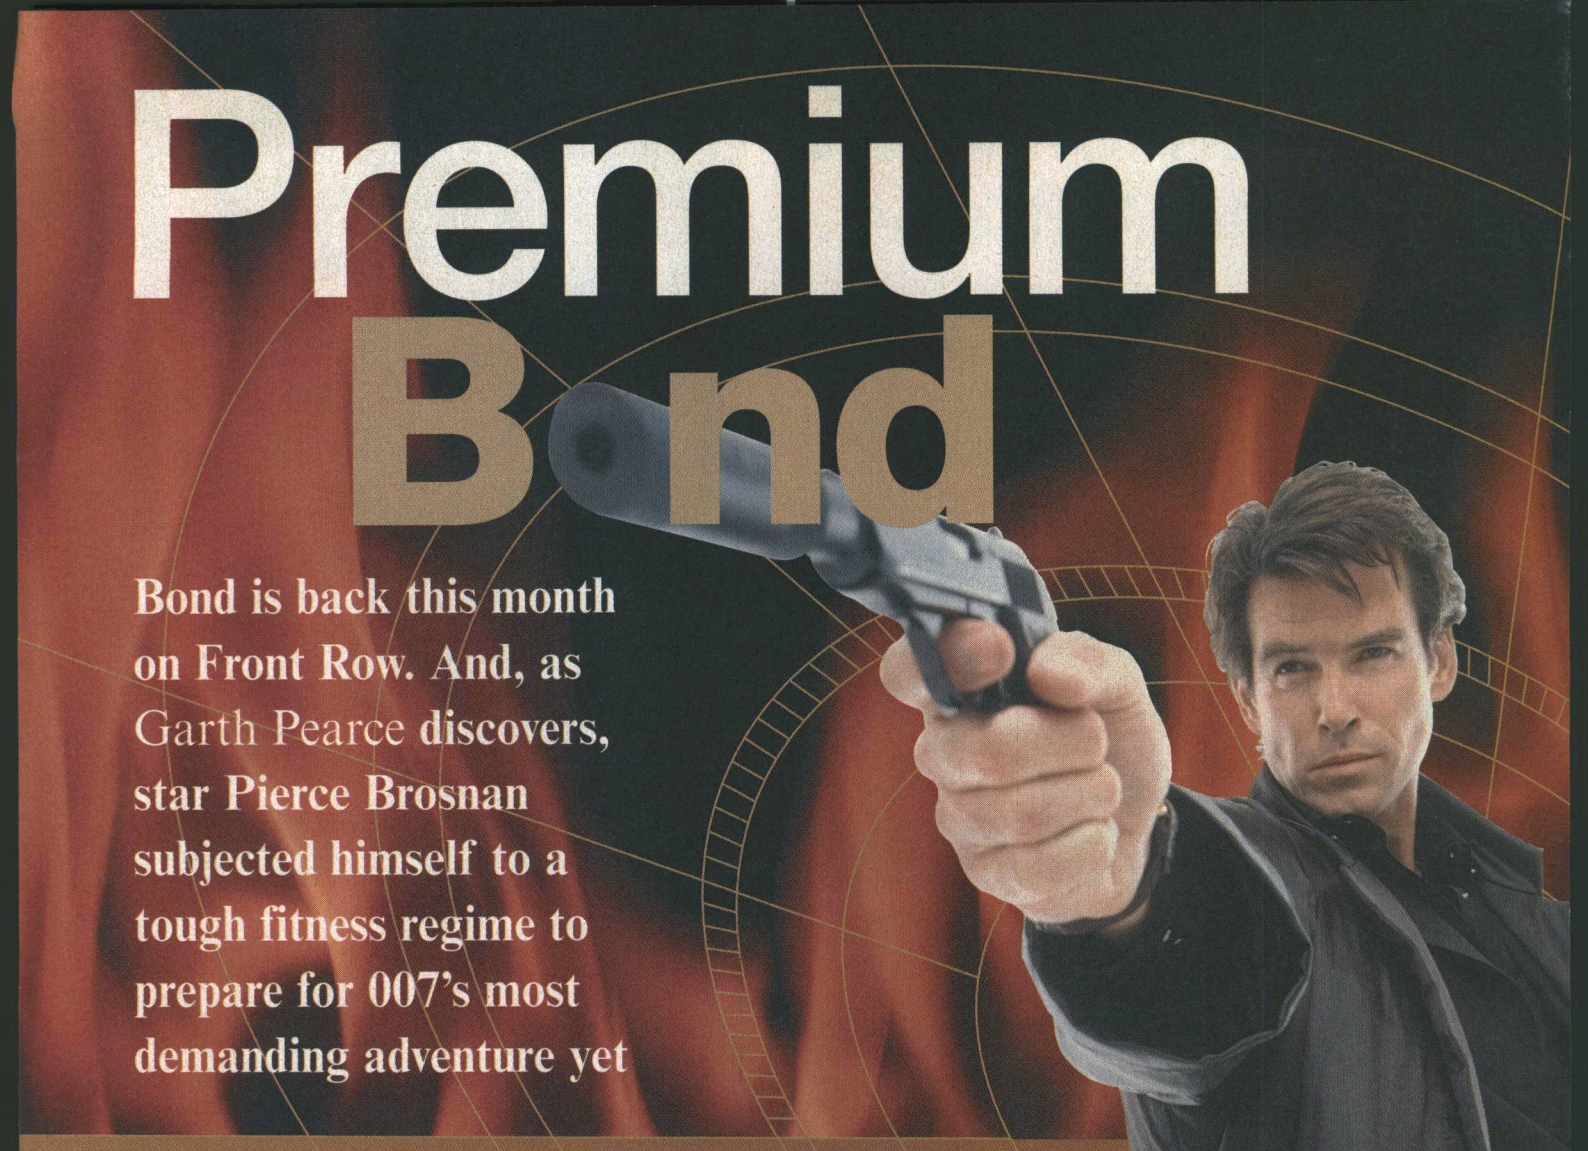
Premium Bond

Bond is back this month on Front Row. And, as Garth Pearce discovers, star Pierce Brosnan subjected himself to a tough fitness regime to prepare for 007's most demanding adventure yet



PIERCE BROSNAN brought new shape to his third appearance as James Bond in The World Is Not Enough. He trimmed two inches off his waistline and added two inches to his chest as a result of daily workouts in the two years since 007's last cinematic mission in Tomorrow Never Dies.

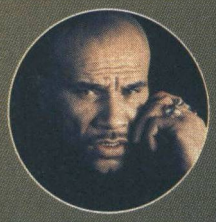
'I gave up the booze and cut down on certain foods,' says Pierce. 'I've also taken to long bike rides and have tried to look after myself. The result is, I've never felt better in years. It was a case of having to put in the work, because Bond is such a tough filming marathon.'

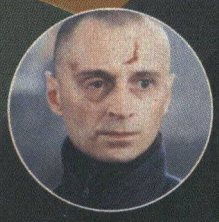
Even the pattern for the expensively sleek Brioni suits, which Brosnan has worn in his previous two Bond films, has had to be altered to accommodate the body changes. And, with an all-action script which was more demanding than ever, he needed every ounce of his strength and fitness. He was also more prepared for action in other ways. 'With my first Bond film, Goldeneye, the stress levels were enormous,' he says. 'There had not been a Bond movie for six years and expectations were high. I have never felt under more professional pressure in my life.

'On Tomorrow Never Dies, there were different problems. The locations had to be changed because the Vietnam government withdrew permission for filming and there were script rewrites virtually every other day. I just had to stay calm and not get myself involved in the politics, but it was difficult.

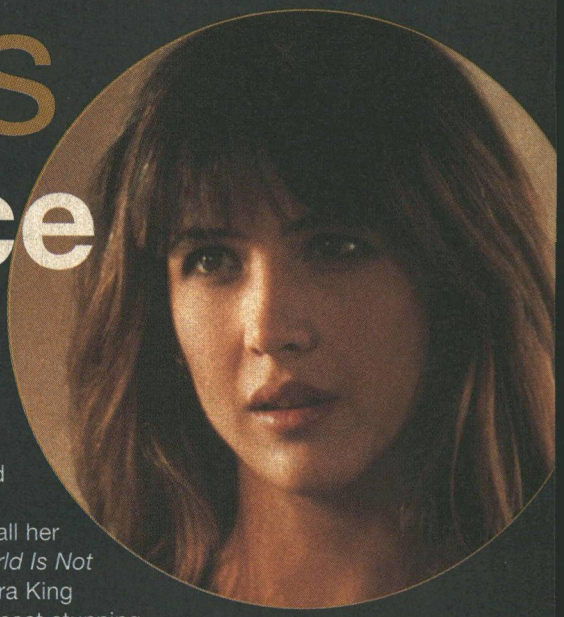
'Yet with this one, all the planning and preparation paid off. We had a great director in Michael Apted, who managed to get a real team spirit going, and I was much more comfortable with the character and what is expected of him.'

There was also inspired casting in Robert Carlyle as the villain, Renard, who can feel no pain thanks to a bullet in the brain. The line-up of Bond women is impressive in both character name and casting: mysterious Elektra King (Sophie Marceau), an oil tycoon's





Sophie's Choice



SOPHIE MARCEAU has spent much of her working life French kissing. She has seduced her way across screen from her mid-teens onwards. Yet only now has Hollywood truly woken up.

She almost steals all her scenes in The World Is Not Enough as Elektra King – one of the most stunning performances of any Bond girl. In fact, the film is worth watching just to see her in action.

Marceau, 33, has come close to establishing herself once before. Her Princess Isabelle offered such warmth to Mel Gibson's William Wallace in Braveheart that she was talked about long after the film collected its batch of Oscars.

Then the difficulties set in.

She became pregnant with her long-term partner, Polish writer and director Andrzej Zulawski, who is 22 years her senior; they move between a house in the suburbs of Warsaw and an apartment in Paris. It was just too complicated, too far away and too baffling for Beverly Hills. This beautiful French woman clearly did not know the rules. To have a child, Vincent, now aged five, just when her career stood a chance of going into overdrive, mystified the movers and shakers of Hollywood. But this is the true charm of Sophie Marceau: she simply refuses to conform to Hollywood-style rules.

Indeed, while she coped brilliantly in the explosive, high tech world of James Bond, she seems more at home in exquisitely detailed period dramas. There was a version of Anna Karenina, and Firelight, in which she played a Swiss governess, as well as the Shakespeare adaptation A Midsummer Night's Dream, in which she starred alongside Michelle Pfeiffer and Calista (Ally McBeal) Flockhart.

Partner Zulawski cast her in his tragic love story L'Amour Braque when she was just 19. 'It was my first love,' she says of him. 'And he is still my only lover. I know it sounds weird nowadays, but that is true. The only other men I go to bed with are on screen.'

As she does, so memorably, with James Bond ...

daughter, is under Bond's protection; nuclear weapons expert Dr Christmas Jones (Denise Richards) becomes his ally and lover; Dr Warmflash (Serena Scott Thomas) gives him a clean bill of health, so he can return to active service.

Robbie Coltrane, whose appearance in Goldeneye was so well received, is back as bluff Russian gangster Valentin Zukovsky, and Dame Judi Dench's M rightly gets more scenes outside of the office. Samantha Bond returns as Miss Moneypenny, the late Desmond Llewelyn bows out as Q and John Cleese has a comic cameo as his assistant.

And top-quality action is guaranteed. Simon Crane, credited with creating cinema's most realistic war scenes in Saving Private Ryan, is stunt co-ordinator. And former stunt ace Vic Armstrong, who doubled for Harrison Ford as Indiana Jones, directs the second unit, which operated on locations in France, Spain, Turkey and Scotland to showcase 007 at his most intrepid.

But most of the interiors – with veteran Bond production designer Peter Lamont creating some incredible-looking sets – were filmed at Pinewood. Observes Brosnan of the celebrated studio: 'The place has a style all its own, with a long Bond history. 'We had done some work there on Tomorrow Never Dies, in the water tanks, but it was a real thrill to be going to work each morning in the studio that made Bond's name at a point when I was still in short trousers.'

Since filming ended, Brosnan, 47, has again played a British agent in an adaptation of novelist John Le Carre's The Tailor of Panama. But there is no doubt that the actor delivers his best Bond to date with The World Is Not Enough – indeed, some critics hailed the film as one of the finest of the series. The result is that Brosnan has more off-screen clout than ever.

He has worked non-stop over the last three years, launching his own company, Irish Dreamtime, and producing and starring in his own small-budget film, The Nephew, as well as a big-budget remake of The Thomas Crown Affair.

And he is soon to be seen in his biggest acting departure yet, playing the lead in Richard Attenborough's majestically photographed Grey Owl. It is the true story of Archie Belaney, from Hastings, who in the Thirties fooled the world into thinking he was a Native American as he campaigned for vital environmental issues in Canada. 'The moment I read the script, I said to my agent: "I will audition for this part, have a screen test, do meetings – anything."' reports Brosnan. 'And he said: "Don't worry, Richard wants you for the role." I could not believe my luck.

'But that's life with the high profile that Bond is able to provide. Anything is possible.'

THE RIVER WILD

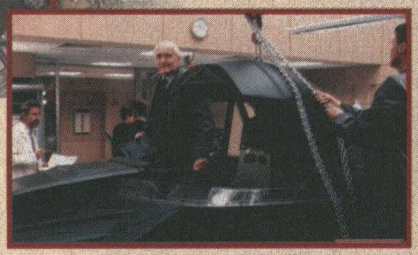
Bond movies are famed for their exciting action scenes, but the boat chase that opens The World Is Not Enough is the most thrilling of the entire series

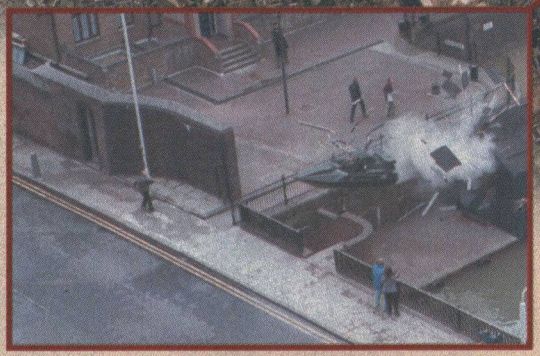
Bond takes Q's boat and gives chase to Cigar Girl down the Thames, past the Houses of Parliament

Wet Wet Wet: Embankment visitors get a soaking as the murderous Cigar Girl speeds past

007 attempts to get the advantage over his aquatic adversary by taking to land and cutting across the Isle of Dogs

At MI6 headquarters, Q (the late Desmond Llewelyn) showcases the craft he intends to use for fishing trips on his retirement





Wapping masquerades as the Isle of Dogs as 007 takes to the air in a bid to head off his foe at the Millennium Dome

The chase is about to reach its explosive conclusion at the Dome

THE MOST spectacular action scene in The World Is Not Enough begins with a twist for those who know their Bond trivia. It is the first time 007 has ever helped himself to Q's state-of-the-art equipment without permission.

He leaps into a jet boat and zooms up the River Thames in hot pursuit of Cigar Girl (Maria Grazia Cucinotta), with Q later lamely complaining that this was a fishing boat which he had intended for his retirement.

But this sensational sequence, which lasts just a few minutes on screen, was the result of 45 days of hard work, organised by second-unit director Vic Armstrong with key stunt men. A slipway was constructed to launch Bond's jet boat as he tracks Cigar Girl in her craft.

There was also an added gimmick in that it could plunge under water. An enclosed engine made Bond's boat submerge and pop up again, like a mini-submarine. Footage was later matched either at Pinewood's tank or bolstered with computer graphics.

There is a poignant moment for fans of Desmond Llewelyn, who was adored for his role as gadgets expert Q – a character he played in all but two of the Bond movies up to The World Is Not Enough. He warns 007, 'Always have an escape plan,' as he disappears. Sadly, it proved to be his final scene. Llewelyn died in a car crash shortly after the London premiere of the film.

COUNTDOWN TO

SKY NEWS

Adam Boulton

Political editor Adam Boulton, who began his broadcasting career with TV-am, will report for Sky from America's east coast, moving around between New York, Washington and Boston. As a young man he studied at university in Washington and is an old hand at American politics, having been involved in election coverage since 1980.

Boulton believes that, whatever people say, the big issue for this election remains the economy.

'It was Bill Clinton who coined the phrase, "It's the economy, stupid." And it still works,' he says. 'The other big issues, like firearms, public services and education, are inclined to be sidelined when the crunch comes. The Clinton administration has left the economy strong and that's why I think Gore will win.

'He is not in the same class as Clinton, though. Clinton remains by far the greatest politician of his generation. He has such an enormously impressive presence, a huge intellect and a lot of charisma. In spite of his obvious faults, I think a lot of Americans are going to miss him.

'Blair is a good communicator, as was Reagan, but Clinton completely overshadowed both of them. I've been in a room with Blair and Clinton together and Blair is like the pupil. With Al Gore the situation is the reverse. Blair has the greater presence and if Gore is elected the relationship between the US and the UK will be a very different one.'

● Adam Boulton will be hosting two Sky News* Forum *specials in Washington with a panel of pundits and key opinion-makers. See listings for details.

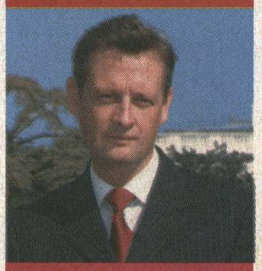
SKY NEWS



Stuart Ramsay

Another TV-am veteran, Washington correspondent Stuart Ramsay has been based in the American capital for two years, and has covered previous election campaigns in the States as well as in Russia.

Ramsay hedges his bets about who will win the race, saying: 'I think the one who makes a mess-up last will lose.'

His favourite election gaffe so far comes from Al Gore.

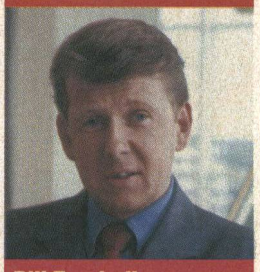
'Gore made this speech on the medical care issue in which he said that his mother had bought a prescription drug for arthritis and it had cost more than when he had bought the same drug for his dog.

'It turned out he was just making it up and a similar possible example had been given in a congressional report. It was so stupid. He didn't have to do it.'

Ramsay has been involved in an unusual kind of coverage during the build-up to the election.

'We've been travelling from Washington to San Francisco and back in a motor caravan – just me, a cameraman and a satellite crew. The idea is to talk to the American people and find out what they are thinking about the issues behind this election.'

BBC NEWS 24



Bill Turnbull

Bill Turnbull will fly to Washington to head up BBC News 24's election coverage along with his co-presenter Philip Hayton.

Turnbull was based in Washington for four years, returning to the UK in 1998, and has been involved in US election coverage since 1984.

As a seasoned observer of world politics, Bill is intrigued by the effects the election results may have on the British Government, but believes that whichever candidate wins, his influence will not be nearly as great as that of outgoing President Bill Clinton.

'New Labour and Blair have modelled themselves on Clinton's style,' says Turnbull. 'Blair has tried to copy him even down to the way he changes his accent when he visits various parts of the country. Just as Clinton will speak Deep Southern in the South, Blair will go Geordie in the North and lapse into estuary English when he is talking to young people.

'Obviously, the best result for Blair would be for Gore, a Democrat, and Clinton's successor, to win. The policies of the Gore administration, like the Clinton administration, are likely to be pretty much in line with New Labour.'

And if his opponent were to triumph? 'If Bush wins, Blair will have to build a whole new relationship. And it may shake Blair a little to see the Democrats thrown out at a time when he has had his own problems over here.'

Turnbull thinks Gore will just about edge the race.

'He would certainly be a president who knows his stuff. He has already been policy-making for eight years on Capitol Hill.

'However, you never know. Americans like dynasties and George Bush Senior was a popular president. If Bush does win, the best way to describe him would be as a learning president. He doesn't have a great track record.'

Indeed, it was Bush who was responsible for Turnbull's favourite campaign gaffe so far. 'The man who wants to be President of the United States was asked on TV to name the leader of Pakistan, General Pervez Musharraf, and all he could manage was The General.'

Aziz Rashid

London-based Aziz Rashid is producing BBC News 24's election coverage, having performed the same chores on the last presidential election for the BBC. His job is to put his station's coverage together and he will be working out of the new specially built BBC studio in Washington.

He says, 'As well as our own team we are fortunate in that we can also call on BBC1 and BBC2. As well as sharing facilities, we are also sharing some programmes, like David Dimbleby live from Washington throughout the day. And, of course, we will be providing 24-hour updates

'Putting all this together can be quite mad, but it's also very exciting.'

● David Dimbleby hosts BBC News 24's live coverage on Tuesday 7th, from 12midnight

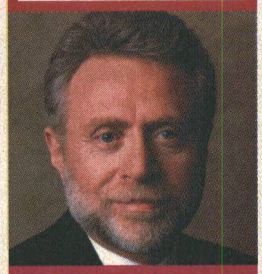
CNN



Wolf Blitzer

Veteran news broadcaster Wolf Blitzer, the most experienced in reporting on US elections, will be the anchorman of CNN's on-the-night coverage.

Blitzer began his journalistic career in Israel as a reporter, first for Reuters in Tel Aviv and then for The Jerusalem Post. The first US election he covered was Jimmy Carter-Gerald Ford in 1976 and he has been involved with every one since. His many awards include a Golden Cable ACE for coverage of the Gulf War and an Emmy for his reporting on the Oklahoma bombings.

Blitzer regards the tussle between Gore and Bush as one of the greatest in American history.

'It's certainly the closest contest there has been in many years – since the Carter-Ford campaign, in fact. And it's hard to pick a winner, although I'm inclined to favour Gore.

'You have to remember that by the end of September, 90 per cent of Americans had made up their minds. The intriguing thing is the battle to win that 10 per cent. And it could go either way.'

Blitzer has already focused heavily on the major campaigns, covering the Democratic convention and interviewing leading figures on both sides.

A highlight was his in-depth interview with Al Gore's vice-president running mate Joe Lieberman.

'Al Gore made history with the selection of the first Jewish candidate to run on a major ticket,' he says.

On air, Blitzer congratulated Lieberman on his appointment, but in more typically combative terms, he challenged the vice-presidential candidate on the issues on which he and Gore disagree, such as the privatisation of social security, which Gore opposes and Lieberman, like Bush, supports.

Blitzer, more than anybody, is aware of the keys to this campaign. It is believed that the battle will be decided in the Midwest and Florida, and that if the Republicans win Florida, Bush will win overall by a narrow margin.

Says Blitzer, 'Our aim will be to be first with everything.'

● CNN coverage begins Tuesday 7th, 10.00pm. Programme highlights include Becoming Al Gore (Saturday 4th) and Living the Bush Legacy (Sunday 5th)

KIM NEWMAN ON ...
POLITICAL SATIRE

Capitol showbiz

Fact is usually stranger than fiction in American politics, but that hasn't stopped Hollywood film-makers taking well-aimed satirical shots at the White House and its incumbents

TOM LEHRER, writer of barbed comic songs, once said political satire became redundant when Henry Kissinger was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. In American politics – always a strange branch of showbiz – the reality is often so flamboyant and bizarre that any attempt to send it up finds it impossible to top. The Marx Brothers, taking Freedonia to total war in Duck Soup, are a rare film administration more out-of-control than any real counterpart. But their plot recurs in Barry Levinson and David Mamet's Wag the Dog, in which a president reeling from a sex scandal opts to go to war with Albania just to give the country a distraction, and calls in a Hollywood figure (Dustin Hoffman) to work with arch spin-doctor Robert De Niro in mounting the battle as a big-budget, all-star production.

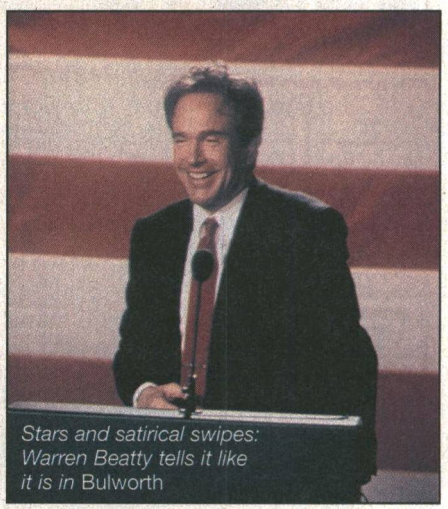
In Bulworth, which plays on Sky Premier this month, Warren Beatty plays a politician whose name suggests exactly how much value you should place on his promises, but who is struck under a curse that makes him embarrassingly speak (and rap) the truth in public. All three films are clearly the product of the Clinton administration, putting comic slants on the soon-to-be ex-President's personal problems, wayward foreign policies and made-for-the-movies habit of doing good in public but being found out for all the ill he has done in private. Strangely, fictional politicians rarely belong to named parties to the extent that presidents like Morgan Freeman in Deep Impact or Richard Dreyfuss in Fail Safe are the sort of men you'd like to see in the White House but who are so idealistic and decent that neither of the big parties would consider running them for the top job in these days of spin and sentiment.

The most influential political movie remains Frank Capra's Roosevelt-era Mr Smith Goes to Washington, in which former scoutmaster James Stewart discovers upon election that the Senate is corrupt and takes to the floor in a filibuster speech that brings down his crooked colleagues.

The staid succession from Roosevelt through Truman to Eisenhower sidelined satirists for a while, but handsome, conspiracy-martyred John Kennedy brought flamboyance back to the office.

A finger-lickin' good moment from writer-director-star Warren Beatty's Bulworth

PHOTOS: KOBAL, MOVIESTORE COLLECTION



Stars and satirical swipes: Warren Beatty tells it like it is in Bulworth

His successors have all been ripe for fictionalisation – good ole boy Johnson, shifty crook Nixon, stumblebum Ford, peanut-farming Carter, Hollywood waxwork Reagan, puking patriarch Bush, lecherous hillbilly Clinton.

But the greatest gift to political satire was Nixon who, even before Watergate, was an easy target – sweatily conscious that he'd never be liked, fumbling in his power-mania and desperate to get out of the mess at the expense of his minions. Nixon has recently been treated gently by the wacky comedy Dick and Oliver Stone's Nixon. But in the Seventies he was usually a villain of Bondian stature, and movies about politics tended to focus on monolithic corruption, as anyone resisting the Establishment is gunned down by zombie hit-men (The Parallax View, Three Days of the Condor).

No matter who has been elected by the time you read this – Gore ('What is he good for?') or George Bush, Part 2: Just Like His Old Man – Tom Lehrer will still be right and wrong. American politics will be so extreme as to be beyond satire, but Hollywood will go further and find a way to send it up.

MARK LITTLE

What's your first movie memory?
Going to see Charlton Heston in The Ten Commandments at the drive-in. Then watching the movie in my pyjamas in the back of the car and eating hot dogs. The sea parting and all those special effects.

Who's your favourite actor?
Robert De Niro was a great inspiration in my formative years when I was at drama school in the late-Seventies. Part of the punk ethic was to act like Robert De Niro. I loved all those films [he made with director Martin Scorsese], like Mean Streets and Taxi Driver.

What's your favourite film?
On the contemporary scene, I loved Fargo. Frances McDormand's performance was brilliant. The whole concept of her as a pregnant policewoman on the trail of these vicious hit men put a whole new angle on the genre. Since then I've enjoyed what people have done with movies like The Blair Witch Project. That film really spooked me. I enjoyed Dogme '95 [the Danish film-making collective, whose work is characterised by improvised performances, natural sound and lighting, and defiantly unadorned camerawork]. There was a similar thing in the Seventies when everyone wanted to be in a punk band. That was a good thing. Now everyone wants to make movies and they just go out and buy a camcorder and do it.

What's your favourite comedy film?
There are so many. I love WC Fields, Jacques Tati. What I'd really like to do is create my own comedy film. I think they are few and far between. It's fun to see a film that you laugh at, and I think I could do that well.

Simon says he wants revenge

After their recent triumph over South Africa, the England rugby union side will be approaching this month's matches against Australia and Argentina with a renewed vigour. England lock forward Simon Shaw tells Simon Johnson that the team will be wanting to avenge many painful defeats at the hands of the Aussies

THIS month England will be attempting to prove to the world that they can become the best team on rugby's international stage.

Australia, the world and Tri-Nations champions, visit Twickenham on Saturday 18th, followed by Argentina on Saturday 25th and South Africa on Saturday 2 December, in one of the toughest autumn schedules England have ever faced.

The team go into the three fixtures with renewed confidence after their heroic 27-22 victory over the Springboks at Bloemfontein in June.

They returned home from the two-Test series with the Springboks disappointed that they had only tied 1-1, but with great satisfaction that the midweek team, full of young players, remained unbeaten against strong provincial outfits.

But lock forward international Simon Shaw believes that the only way to build on the successes of the summer tour is by winning all three of the forthcoming Tests.

Shaw says: 'The mood in the camp is very upbeat and positive after the performances in South Africa.

'It was a big step proving that we can beat one of the best sides in world rugby on their own turf, but we must now put an end to one-off performances and become more consistent.

'The public are expecting us to win because they have seen that we beat South Africa away, so feel we must beat these countries at home.'

Shaw is particularly looking forward to facing world champions Australia, although acknowledges it will also provide the toughest Test. 'Each game is very important, but it will be a huge scalp if we beat Australia because they are an incredible force,' he says. 'They do have a few players missing, but I can't say that there is one player to watch because there are so many to look out for.

'But I want revenge because I have never been in an England team that has beaten Australia, and I suffered a painful defeat with England over there in 1997.'

The 27-year-old is also aware, however, that revenge will be a great motive used by the Springboks, who are still smarting at the English defeat in the summer.

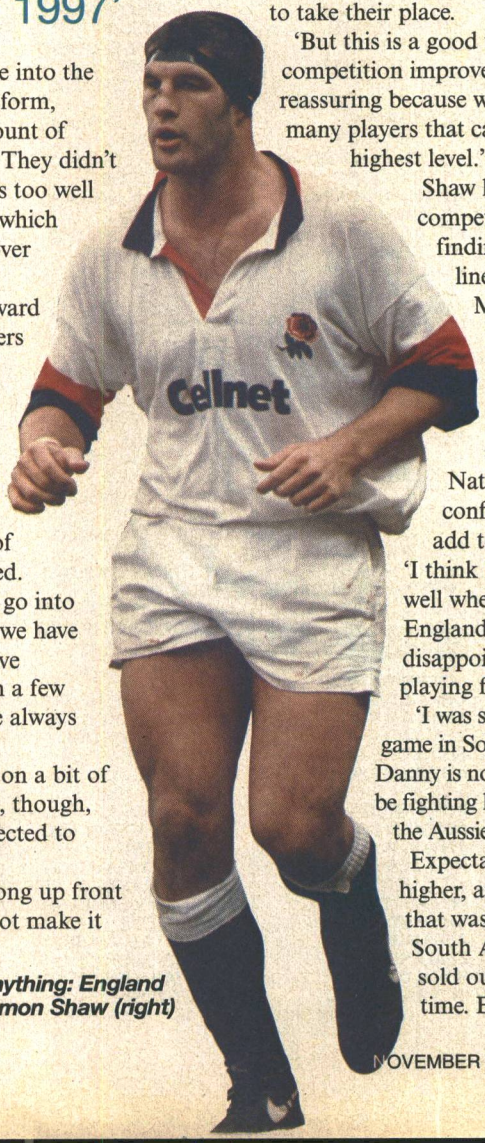
They travel to London with new coach Harry Viljoen in charge after Nick Mallett's resignation, and Shaw believes this gives the opposition even more of an incentive.

'This is going to be a really tough game because they want to impress the new coach and put one over on us at the same time.

'South Africa come into the game in quite good form, considering the amount of criticism they took. They didn't start the Tri-Nations too well but ended strongly, which included a victory over the All Blacks.'

But the Wasps forward has warned supporters and his teammates not to get complacent about their up-coming opponents Argentina, who he feels are in danger of being underestimated. 'None of us should go into that game thinking we have already won it. I have played against them a few times and they have always proved very tricky opposition. We are on a bit of a hiding to nothing, though, because we are expected to win comfortably.

'They are very strong up front and will certainly not make it easy for us.'



Ready for anything: England lock forward Simon Shaw (right)

But all the talk of challenging to become the world's best has signalled a turnaround in fortunes for coach Clive Woodward and his men. A year ago, England failed to live up to expectations when they crashed out of the World Cup at the Quarter Final stage against the Springboks. And despite winning the first Six Nations Championship earlier this year, the campaign ended in major disappointment when they were beaten by Scotland in the final game.

But Shaw insists it is a sign of the strength of English rugby that the team has bounced back so impressively.

He adds: 'The World Cup especially was a major blow, but it is an indication of how strong our team is that we are now rated on a par with South Africa.

'We were lucky that we had a major tour so soon after the disappointments and were able to take a huge squad full of young guys. They gave the first team a real boost – as well as a fright!

'They performed so well in midweek that the main guys in the first team knew someone was knocking on their shoulder to take their place.

'But this is a good thing. The competition improves us and is also reassuring because we know that we have many players that can compete at the highest level.'

Shaw has been a victim of competition himself, finding his place in the line-out behind captain Martin Johnson in the South Africa Tests occupied by Danny Grewcock, despite his strong showing in the Six Nations. But he is still confident that he can add to his 15 caps.

'I think I have played very well when representing England and was disappointed not to be playing from the start.

'I was still involved in every game in South Africa and feel Danny is no better than me. I'll be fighting hard to start against the Aussies, that's for sure.'

Expectation has never been higher, and an indication of that was the Australia and South Africa games being sold out in double-quick time. England must deliver.

Don panic!

It was always going to be difficult for Wimbledon to adapt to life in the First Division after a 14-year uninterrupted run in the top-flight. But their miserable start to the season still came as a shock. Terry Burton's injury-ravaged side (15 potential first-team players were sidelined before a ball was kicked) failed to register a single win in their opening four games. Even at such an early stage, comparisons were being drawn between Wimbledon and their equivalents last season: while fellow relegation victims Watford were going to 'do a Charlton' and hurl themselves into going straight back up, Wimbledon seemed to be following Blackburn's example and were moping around in disbelief at being in the Nationwide League. Morale was low: the Dons had already lost Ben Thatcher and Neil Sullivan to Spurs, and Carl Cort to Newcastle. Then John Hartson (above) seemed set to join Rangers, though the transfer was called off after doubts about his fitness. Ironically, the fiery Welshman was the main mover in the Dons' spectacular reversal of fortune, netting five goals in three games. It's difficult to say if the south Londoners have turned the corner, but this weekend they face Dave Bassett's Barnsley at Oakwell, a side who had a worse start to the season, losing 1-0 against Watford before suffering heavy defeats to Birmingham (4-1) and Fulham (5-1).

McQueen for a day

They simply don't make movie stars like Steve McQueen anymore; with his rugged good looks and the undercurrent of danger he gave to his intense, enigmatic characters, the ex-reform school boy was the quintessential cool tough guy of the Sixties. His status as a leading man was established in the pub quiz favourites The Magnificent Seven and The Great Escape, as well as in the ultra-stylish crime classic Bullitt. While none of those is playing in Sky Cinema's celebration of the actor this week, McQueen is still nicely represented by some fine films, including An Enemy of the People, The War Lover, The Hunter (his swan song performance) and Nevada Smith.

LOVE STARS BY MARGIE THILLART

NOVEMBER BIRTHDAYS
5th Bryan Adams 11th Leonardo DiCaprio
12th David Schwimmer 21st Goldie Hawn
19th Meg Ryan 24th Billy Connolly

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries
21 March-20 April ★★
MARS moves into your relationship zone, igniting passion and stirring up trouble. Temptation is all around you and unless you exercise restraint, the repercussions on your love life could be disastrous. Keep that roving eye in check.

Taurus
21 April-21 May ★★★
AFTER weeks of standing still, the brakes come off and you make swift progress in a romantic or business venture. In addition, a full moon in your sign on the 12th helps you see life and love from a fresh perspective.

Gemini
22 May-21 June ★★★
VENUS weaves a magic spell over your sign, bringing enchanting new people into your life. If you feel romance has been lacking or the odds against you, this loving planet helps fulfil your wildest fantasies in the weeks ahead.

Cancer
22 June-23 July ★★★
THOSE perfectly laid plans may have gone astray recently, but you'll regain the upper hand with little or no effort this month. The theme of expansion applies to your sign, so redefine your goals and set your sights high.

Leo
24 July-23 August ★★
ALTHOUGH you love being the centre of attention, you'll value your privacy more than usual this month. Others may think you're playing hard-to-get, but any time spent alone will help to rejuvenate you emotionally and physically.

Virgo
24 August-23 September ★★
SENSUOUS stars put you in a romantic mood and you'll prefer being part of a couple to going it alone. Just be careful who you give your heart to this month. Someone who is manipulative may take advantage of your open-handedness.

Libra
24 September-23 October ★★★
FAR from being your usual hesitant self, you'll surprise others with a tendency to make snap decisions. Emphatic Mars enters your sign, spurring you into action and giving you the courage to speak your mind.

Scorpio
24 October-22 November ★★★
CREATIVE Mercury moves forward in your sign, inspiring new ideas and sharpening your tongue. Anyone who argues with you this month is likely to come off second best and will soon see your point of view. Push the advantage.

Sagittarius
23 November-22 December ★★
WITH your ruler Jupiter stationary, you'll probably feel a little frustrated by the lack of action. Your usual sense of optimism deserts you this month and rather than trusting fate, you'll try to manipulate or speed up events.

Capricorn
23 December-20 January ★★
YOU'RE sometimes naive in matters of the heart and should watch out for manipulators or cheats this month. With sinister stars affecting your sign, learn to live life on your own terms and trust no one with your secrets.

Aquarius
21 January-19 February ★★
SATURN is a great teacher, but its lessons are often learned the hard way. Some of you may feel emotionally deprived this month, while others struggle with a personal problem. Make sure you draw on your inner strength.

Pisces
20 February-20 March ★★★
YOU'RE frequently misunderstood or taken for granted, but in a turnabout, others finally grasp your meaning and support your cause. One of your dreams comes close to reality soon and an adversary becomes your ally.

LIVE DERBY COUNTY V WEST HAM UNITED SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

West Ham have not managed to gather many points so far this season, and their visit to fellow strugglers Derby at Pride Park could provide a vital boost to the Hammers' early season campaign if players like their teenage attacking midfielder Joe Cole (pictured, right) are on song. But Derby manager Jim Smith will no doubt have other ideas and will be looking to his own young gun Malcolm Christie (pictured, right) to help pull the Rams away from the relegation zone.

Week 2

Saturday 11th November-Friday 17th November

Are you watching me?

Robert De Niro has electrified audiences with some of the most powerful, emotionally truthful scenes in cinema. Arguably the most influential actor of the last 25 years, he is famed for his intensive preparation for his roles – an obsessive quest for authentic character detail that he pushed to the limit when he gained over 60lbs for his remarkable Oscar-winning performance in Martin Scorsese's Raging Bull (1980). Sky Cinema honours De Niro this month with a week-long retrospective of his movies, which gets underway with a film that is as much reviled as it is revered. The swan song of director Sergio Leone (in a rare expedition out of the spaghetti West), 1984's Once Upon a Time in America is an epic gangster tale whose decade-straddling plot is told with a dramatic sweep and poetry. The film explores its themes of loyalty, betrayal and guilt with great aplomb, featuring fine performances from De Niro and James Woods, and pays evocative attention to time and place. It is also quite uncompromisingly brutal, and has a nasty misogynistic streak that is, frankly, difficult to defend. The film is being shown in its full-uncut form over two nights. Guilty by Suspicion, meanwhile, is culled from an artistically disappointing time in the actor's career that came between the triumphs of Scorsese's mob movies GoodFellas (1990) and Casino (1995). It is set at the height of the Communist witch hunt hysteria of the Fifties. De Niro plays a Hollywood director whose refusal to rat on his friends to the House Un-American Activities Commission results in him being blacklisted. The film is a well-intentioned indictment of a disgraceful episode in American history, but is let down by Irwin Winkler's undistinguished direction, and may have been more interesting and packed a more dramatic punch if De Niro's character had actually been a card-carrying Communist. The week's remaining two films date from that same year (1991), but showcase two very different performances. In the warmly-told comedy Mad Dog and Glory, De Niro is a likable, shy, awkward cop who accidentally saves the life of a mobster (Bill Murray) and is rewarded with the gift of a girl (Uma Thurman) for a week. It is De Niro at his sweetest. Cape Fear, however, finds the actor at his most explosive. A slick update of the 1962 classic, it is atypical of both director Martin Scorsese and De Niro, the former opting for overwrought dramatic devices and the latter replying with a hysterical performance as a tattooed, revenge-hungry stalker. The season concludes next week with GoodFellas and Francis Ford Coppola's richly textured The Godfather Part II, which earned De Niro his first Oscar.

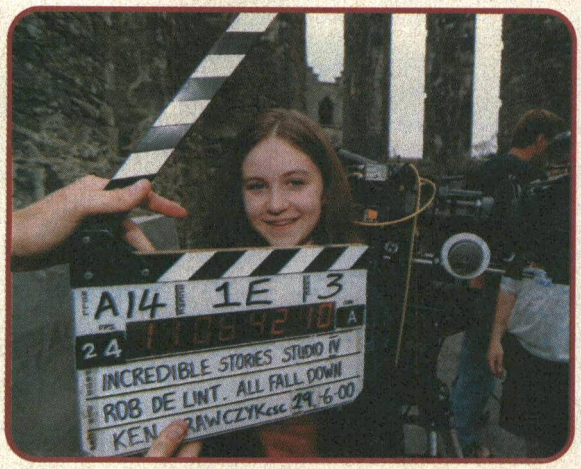
Hannah's Story...



CAN you imagine having your very own story made into a half-hour television drama and broadcast nationwide? That's exactly what's happened to Hannah Lee, a 13-year-old from Lincolnshire who is among 17 winners from Disney Channel's Incredible Story Studio, a search for the country's hot new writing talent that received almost 1500 entries.

Hannah's story, All Fall Down, follows a group of children on a school trip to a village that was affected by the plague in the 1600s. 'I'm quite interested in that time in history,' Hannah tells Cable Guide. 'And I was trying to think of a story where there was a historical link to it all.' With the help of her teacher, Mrs Marshall, Hannah entered the competition along with the rest of her English class, and then forgot about it. It wasn't until months later that she got a surprise phone call telling her she was a winner. 'I was in the car, on my way home from dancing class, when my dad called me. I was really excited!'

Filming took place in June and Hannah visited Ireland for the first time to go behind the scenes and feature on camera herself. 'I was followed around by a camera doing my introduction,' says Hannah. 'I was an extra too, as one of the class on the school trip, I had a line in that!'

A keen dancer and actress, Hannah is now determined to keep up with her English classes. After all, she's not done badly so far!

Incredible Story Studio Day, Disney Channel, Saturday 18th

WIN!

To celebrate Cartoon Network's head-to-head between Ed, Edd 'n' Eddy and the Powerpuff Girls (30 October), we have some great prizes up for grabs. Ten lucky winners will each receive a special Ed, Edd 'n' Eddy jawbreaker machine, unavailable in the shops, and a Powerpuff Girl doll and Powerpuff Girl CD Holder (on sale at Woolworths).

To enter, tell us who created Ed, Edd 'n' Eddy.

Send your answer on a postcard, with your name and address, to Cable Guide/Cartoon Network competition, PO BOX 2176, London W1A 5TW. The first ten correct entries drawn at random will win. Closing date 30 November 2000. Full competition rules are on page 216.

Ed, Edd 'n' Eddy

THE three friends with the same name are back on TV screens this month with more crazy schemes.

Ed, Edd and Eddy, who all live in the same cul-de-sac and share a love of jawbreakers, are the misfits of their neighbourhood. The other kids don't really like them, but at least they've got each other.

The show's creator, Danny Antonucci, has been working on the new series for the past three years. So what misadventures can we expect Ed, Double D and Eddy to get up to in the new series?

'Much of the same, although I've introduced more layers to all the characters,' Danny says. 'The show has become more dense in character and richer with art.'

As for the characters' names – or should that be name? – Danny says he's always been intrigued by the name Ed.

'The name Ed, to me, carries many funny images: Edward means staunch and proper, Ed means slow and disturbing and Eddy means sly and conniving.'

So will any of the Eds be growing up in this series, or just getting up to more mischief?

'The Eds would never grow up, Danny says. 'Even if they did, lost in their own worlds, I think they'd still continue to be misfits ...'

Ed, Ed 'n' Eddy, Cartoon Network new series starts 30 October, daily 4.30pm

Five star

SIX SINGLE releases under their belts and no less than six hits straight in at the top – Westlife have achieved a record no other British act in history has managed. But success doesn't come easy, and as the lads will tell you, their journey to fame and fortune has been hard work.

'We get a few days off here and there, but that's really it,' says Kian. 'If we get a weekend off, we will definitely go home.'

The quintet's meteoric rise to pop stardom has seen them transform from a little-known Irish boy band, co-managed by fellow Irish crooner Ronan Keating, into a group with an international fan base. Cracking the US was a target this year, and one American in particular certainly seems to have fallen for their charms – they recorded their last number one, Against All Odds, with Mariah Carey. So how do they avoid the fame going to their heads?

'You realise it's about luck,' says Mark. 'I think the people that turn into arrogant pop stars are the people that don't realise they are very lucky to be in the position they are in.'

As part of MTV's Making the Video week, you can see Westlife preparing for their seventh single release, My Love (Thursday 23rd, 9.30pm). Is there another number one on the cards? Almost certainly – the lads are on a roll!

Cliques united: the popular, and the not so popular, bow out in style

POPULAR, the show that emphasises, if nothing else, the importance of being happy with who you are, comes to an end this month. And the last episodes of season one look set to be as captivating as the rest of the series has been: more equal rights protests, fighting the cause for imprisoned lobsters, blonde ambition, love for Sugar Daddy, uncharacteristic alliances and the prospect of a famous step-father for Mary Cherry. Sky One is hoping to acquire the second season of Popular, currently showing in America. But, for now, prepare for a season finale like no other, on Thursday 30th.

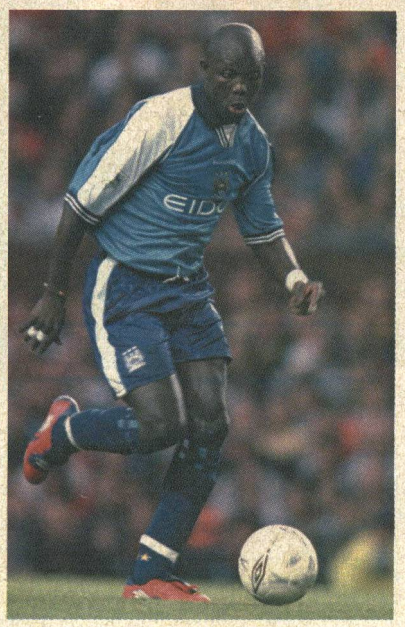
Saturday 18th November-Friday 24th November

Who will be the pride of Manchester?



Passions will be running high in Manchester this Saturday for the English equivalent of the Celtic v Rangers Old Firm derby, as Joe Royle's spirited, grass-roots City take on glamorous media darlings United. It's the first league meeting for the teams since City's nightmare 1995-96 campaign, when United pulled off the double over their neighbours. The Blues, then under the tutelage of Alan Ball, were relegated and two seasons later had that sinking feeling again when they dropped to the Second Division. But their climb back to the top flight (gaining promotion from two divisions in as many seasons) has been brave and inspiring. Manager Royle signalled his intention to preserve City's status as a Premiership side when he signed veteran Liberian international George Weah (above) and former West Ham favourite Paulo Wanchope to bolster his attack. But despite Royle's fighting talk and this impressive front line, City were brought down to Earth with a bump when they suffered a 4-0 defeat to their old First Division rivals Charlton in the opening game. The nay-sayers were quick to point out that City certainly didn't look like a cohesive, Premiership-calibre side. Since that terrible start, however, Royle's men have notched up some encouraging results, including a hard-fought win against Leeds and, though they ultimately came away with no points, an impressive display against Liverpool at Anfield. Still, there are few outside the Blue half of Manchester who would give City's defence a chance against the onslaught of a concerted United attack.

Chilled to the bone

Now that the joys of summer are well and truly over, we can be assured of a good dose of cold, wet weather. No change there. Appalling jokes aside, exposure to the cold is no laughing matter, as one look at military history proves. During the Punic Wars in 218BC, one leader, Hannibal, lost nearly half of his 46,000 army crossing the Alps, thanks to cold-related illnesses. In the Napoleonic wars, only 350 of 12,000 men in the Twelfth Division survived the cold. And in more recent times, there were large losses due to exposure in both World Wars. Even in today's peaceful climate, cold weather is estimated to cause 30,000 deaths each year in the UK alone. The charity Age Concern estimates that when the temperature drops one degree Celsius below average, 8000 more people will die. Hypothermia, which occurs when the body's temperature falls way below its normal 35°C, is one of the most deadly cold-induced illnesses. Shiver: Hypothermia, premiering this week, delivers chilling tales of the killer condition, including the story of Karlee Kosolofski's, who was found with a temperature of only 14°C! Her body became stiff, with fixed pupils and no signs of life, but she survived, adding weight to the premise that no one with hypothermia is dead until warm and dead.

Carpenter constructs a toothsome thriller

While John Carpenter's Vampires isn't the long-awaited return to form for the director of such classics as Halloween and The Thing, it marks an improvement on recent fare and certainly won't disappoint horror hounds. James Woods heads the cast as a driven vampire slayer, pitted against a master vampire (Thomas Ian Griffith). Carpenter has long professed a desire to make a Western, and came close with Assault on Precinct 13, a tightly constructed tribute to Howard Hawks's Rio Bravo. But of all his films, Vampires owes the most to the director's beloved genre, with Woods and his gang striding through dusty New Mexico like a demon-busting Wild Bunch, while their undead adversaries are the outlaws. Despite occasionally succumbing to the religious musings of Carpenter's thriller Prince of Darkness, the film moves at a brisk rate, propelled by the director's own atmospheric score, which pays unashamed homage to Italian film-maker Dario Argento's cult classic Suspiria.

Vicki Butler-Henderson

fuel circle

The petrol crisis should be over for now, but Vicki Butler-Henderson ponders what we'll all do when the fuel runs out for good

CARS, on the whole, don't grab newspaper headlines. But over the summer, they even managed to out-do Posh Spice in column inches. Gee whiz, it's been bedlam hasn't it? What with the first fuel blockades in decades, fights at the petrol pumps, basic groceries disappearing off the shelves in imminent nuclear war fashion, and the near collapse of life as we know it.

And while we may be able to fill up our tanks to our heart's content now, we may not have heard the last of the fuel crisis. Everyone's now crossing their fingers in the hope of a fuel price-cut in the upcoming pre-Budget statement.

I know, to my cost, that oil prices have risen and fallen like a pair of lungs – my home heating bill seems to double every month – but I don't fancy burning anything other than fuel to keep me warm and keep me on the road.

That's why the Alternative Fuel Research departments of every car manufacturer will be as busy as bees trying to up the ante in the search for the ultimate fuel for the future. Following the speed with which the country's pumps ran dry during summer, let's just hope they come up with an everlasting solution.

There are lots of environmentally friendly options being explored by scientists around the world, the most popular of which seems to be solar power. All well and good for most of the world – for the British it could well mean we'd only get to use our cars for two or three weeks a year!

Apparently, at the common rate of consumption – tipped to be 100 million barrels of oil each day by 2020 – we're in danger of permanently running out in about 80 years time.

When those very big fuel tanks do run out, what will you do with your last tank of juice? I reckon the country will be split into three camps on this one and so, for what they're worth, here are my theories!

SCROOGE

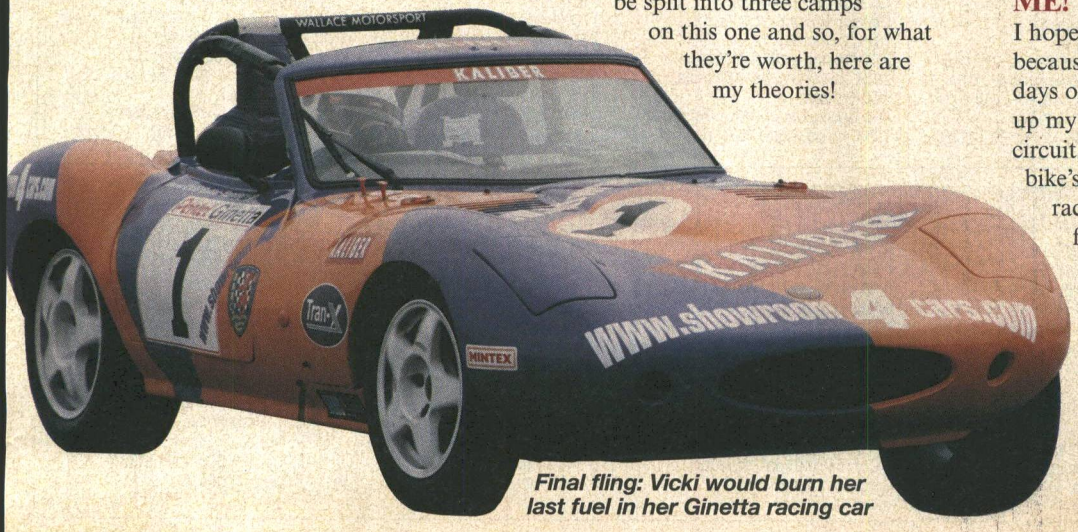
These are the people who will have run around like mad things panic-buying a couple of secret tankfuls, before settling down to drive, ever sooo slooooowly, for thousands of miles. With a smug expression. Spoilsports.

FLAMBOYANT

I love these people! They're the ones who'll throw the whole lot on to a massive bonfire in the middle of a field and set light to it, sharing the experience with the neighbours – and anyone within a two million-mile radius. Superb effort.

ME!

I hope there'll be plenty on my side here, because I'd just have one or two great days of pure, petrol-driven fun. I'd fill up my Ducati and ride it to a racing circuit, then put the remaining fuel (the bike's tank isn't that big) in my Ginetta racing car and race until running on fumes. Afterwards, I'd pray to high heaven that one of those car manufacturers would have produced a suitably brilliant fuel for the future.



Final fling: Vicki would burn her last fuel in her Ginetta racing car

Having a ball

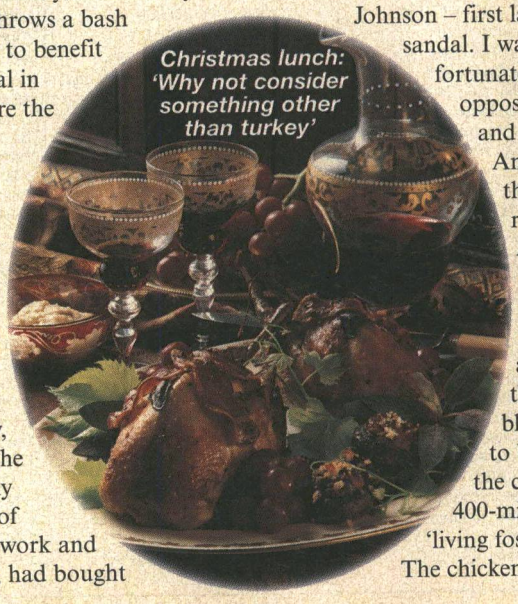
Ross Burden
OUT AND ABOUT

Ross Burden has never been one to turn down a charity bash or two – especially if graceful fillies and fossilized fish are part of the deal

AUTUMN'S now very much upon us and the trees outside the window of my office have taken on the colour of pheasants. In fact, it's rather fun to tell people that I've got a couple of birds hanging around the flat! The benefit of living on the first floor is that even the wiliest of urban foxes haven't mastered the extension ladder yet. This month's motto is, 'It's better to give than to receive.' We've reached the season of the charity ball, of partying for good causes with the any-excuse-for-a-knees-up brigade. Two of the best bashes I've been to recently couldn't have been more different from each other.

'Two of the best bashes I've been to recently couldn't have been more different from each other'

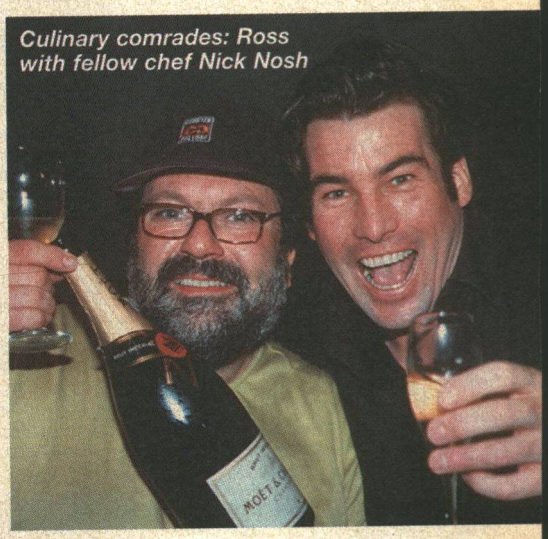
The first was the (now annual) Red Cross dinner that Carlton Food Network regular Aldo Zilli gives every year. The man who likes to make you an offer you can't understand throws a bash for celebrity mates to benefit a children's hospital in South Africa, where the need is great but, mercifully, the pound goes very far. The plan was to have James Martin (of Carlton Food's Entertaining with James), Nick Nosh, of Nosh Brothers notoriety, and myself to be the waiters. But Jeremy Hallsworth, head of Carlton Food Network and patron of the arts, had bought a seat on his table for me so I watched as the others carried on and press-ganged a few likely candidates into helping. Nick and James did a splendid job, even if the bandana-wearing James did spend more time chatting up the punters than plate jockeying.



Christmas lunch: 'Why not consider something other than turkey'

A far more sober event was the Action Against Breast Cancer ball at Sandown Racecourse. I've agreed to become a co-patron with Charles Miller Smith, the chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI), and TV celeb and author Sandi Toksvig. Their combined wordsmithery will leave me free to be the patron of canapes!

In this instance I was again seated, rather than working. One hundred and fifty fillies and colts behaved with great grace – in the mane (!) The filliest of them all was former Page Three lovely Jilly Johnson – first lady of the strappy sandal. I was most fortunately seated opposite her blondeness and across from Dr Anthony Leatham, the head of the research team that ABC funds. Having found him to be an amateur palaeontologist as well as a thoroughly great bloke, I proceeded to bore for Britain on the coelacanth, the 400-million-year-old 'living fossil' fish. The chicken dinner was perfectly nice – though how much more interesting to have had free-range pheasant. While you plan your Christmas menu, why not consider something other than turkey. Perhaps partridges weren't meant to just be in pear trees. Happy hunting ...



Culinary comrades: Ross with fellow chef Nick Nosh

ROSS IN THAILAND

Our globe-trotting gastronome continues his guide to the dishes of the South East Asian kingdom this month on Carlton Food Network. Hunger-inducing highlights see Ross preparing roast aubergine with prawns and fish sauce, and stir-fried ungchoi in oyster sauce. He also comes up with some tastebud-tickling methods of using garlic.

Catch Ross in Ross in Thailand on Carlton Food Network, Fridays 1.30pm

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, SCI-FI

As Sci-Fi celebrates its fifth birthday, Paul Simpson looks back over the highlights of the channel's first half-decade

SCI-FI isn't going away. And neither is the channel bearing that name, which celebrates its fifth birthday this month. Though seen by some as a minority interest, science fiction films dominate the box office charts (think of Star Wars: Episode 1 – The Phantom Menace and The Matrix), and Sci-Fi has followed suit, now reaching 6.1 million homes in the UK. As it's progressed, Sci-Fi has earned respect from both its peers and from viewers: Cable Guide readers voted it the Most Innovative and Exciting Channel two years running. Sci-Fi beat Sky to show the second series of First Wave, and debuting US hit Now and Again early next year. Whether your taste is the darker terrain explored in The Hunger and Millennium, outer space adventures in Farscape, or the oddities revealed in Fortean TV, there's something for you showing on Sci-Fi.

TOP 5 SCI-FI SHOWS:

Quatermass: Watch this 1979 mini-series now, and realise how prophetic it was!

Babylon 5: Strong US sci-fi series, with a defined beginning, middle and end. Mira Fulan stars as Ambassador Delenn (pictured).

Kolchak the Night Stalker: The prototype for The X-Files – a journalist investigates things that go bump in the night.

The Twilight Zone: Self-contained plays guaranteed to make you think about things in a different way.

Quantum Leap: Serious themes of discrimination, alienation and loss of identity in a well-rounded package.

TOP 5 CHARACTERS:

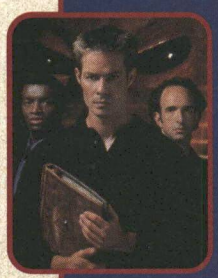
Bernard Quatermass: The first and best British sci-fi hero. A lone voice crying in the wilderness.

Frank Black (Millennium): A man who doesn't want to come to terms with the horrors around him.

Bob Wilson: Who? William Shatner's terrified passenger sees a gremlin on the wing of his plane in the classic Twilight Zone episode Nightmare at 20,000 Feet.

Highlander: The Raven: The Immortal Amanda could have been so much more.

TOP 5 MOST WATCHED PROGRAMMES:



First Wave: Only Cade Foster (Sebastian Spence, pictured) knows the truth. Aliens are here!

Lexx: In space no one can hear you ... do whatever you want!

Babylon 5: The dawn of the third age of mankind.

Millennium: The darkness falls around one man ...

American Gothic: ... and here it's affecting a whole town.

LIVE GOLF: PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF SKY SPORTS 1 1.00AM

Tiger Woods is going for a hat trick at the $1m Grand Slam of Golf tournament in Hawaii. Indeed, Woods's grip on the golfing world has meant special measures for the tournament. The field should contain the winners of the four major championship titles, but Woods has won three of them, so alternatives have been added to the competition in the shape of Tom Lehman and Paul Azinger. The other place is filled by US Masters champion Vijay Singh (pictured).

Farscape and away: l-r Captain Crais, Rygel XVI, Chiana, Zhaan, Officer Aeryn Sun, Commander John Crichton and Ka'D'Argo

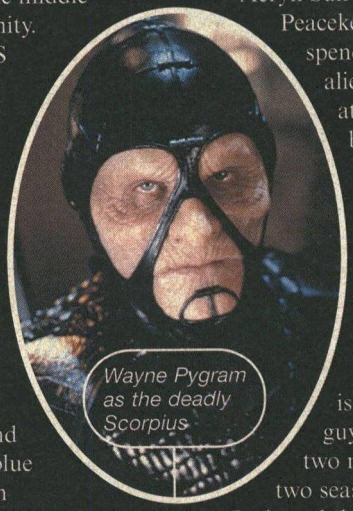
Life, the universe and Farscape

'The idea is taking any one of us and dropping us into Star Wars.' That's how Farscape creator Rockne S O'Bannon sums up his series – one of the highlights of Sci-Fi's fifth anniversary celebrations. Words: Paul Simpson

ASTRONAUT John Crichton (Party of Five's Ben Browder) finds himself on the other side of the universe, in the sci-fi series Farscape, when a wormhole opens up and transports him and his module into the middle of what appears to be insanity.

Farscape creator Rockne S O'Bannon explains: 'John Crichton's seen Star Wars, he's seen all the Star Trek films, Monty Python – he's seen all those things that we all know – and he can bring them to bear on the world that he's in.' But it's still a major shock when he's brought on board a living spaceship and meets the aliens with whom he's destined to spend a long time: the tall, bald blue priestess Pa'u Zotoh Zhaan (played by Mad Max 2's Virginia Hey); tentacled warrior Ka D'Argo (The Castle's Anthony Simcoe); and two animatronic creations – Rygel XVI, a Fu Manchu-moustached overgrown slug, and Pilot, a multi-tasking navigator.



Wayne Pygram as the deadly Scorpius

The love interest is provided by Pitch Black star Claudia Black, who plays Aeryn Sun – an estranged military Peacekeeper, exiled after spending too much time with aliens. 'There's an obvious attraction in the very beginning [between Crichton and Aeryn Sun],' says Browder. 'Intellectually and emotionally they're so far apart … over time you find they are getting more like each other.'

No science fiction show is complete without its bad guys, and Farscape boasts two major villains over the first two seasons – Captain Bialar Crais and the leather-clad Scorpius. Crais is after revenge – he believes that Crichton is responsible for his younger brother's death – while Scorpius is after the knowledge that he discovers hiding in Crichton's brain when he interrogates him. 'Scorpius is death, man!' Ben Browder laughs, although Wayne Pygram who plays him sees him as a man who will do what it takes to get what he needs. 'Scorpius is someone who's been around for a long time, and it takes a lot to get him excited,' he says. 'The wormhole technology is like the splitting of the atom: it's the unknown, and whoever gets there first is going to be the most powerful person in this realm of this world.'

Filming in Australia has given an unfamiliar edge to the show but Farscape has made its mark globally by breaking the rules – if something seems obvious to the producers, they'll find a way of doing it differently. Join them in the Uncharted Territories.

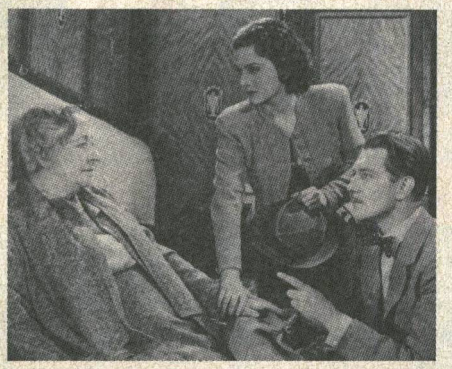
Week 4

Saturday 25th November-Thursday 30th November



A Hitch in time

Alfred Hitchcock deftly fused mystery, comedy and romance to invent the thriller genre. Starting out as a humble title card illustrator for silent productions, he went on to direct more than 60 films, including England's first talkie. More than 70 years after his directorial debut, Hitch still has mass appeal and unsurpassed critical acclaim. Aside from that, he was a great self-promoter and with 43 cameos Hitchcock ensured he was the star. This weekend Carlton Cinema honours the master of suspense with a triple bill. Kicking off with an early classic, The Lady Vanishes (1938), a fast-paced espionage film about an old woman who goes missing during a train journey. The 39 Steps (1935) follows, starring Robert Donat as the innocent hero pulled into a spy ring. Hitch's swan song, Family Plot (1976), aptly finishes off this short tribute.

Carlton Cinema, from Saturday 25th, 7pm and 9pm; repeats 9am

It's derby day

Prepare for one of the most passionately contested, full-blooded fixtures in football this Sunday – the Old Firm Derby between Glasgow arch-rivals Celtic and Rangers. The 1997-98 campaign saw Celtic break Rangers' seeming monopoly on the league title (which they had won for nine consecutive years prior to that). But the hooped team's well-documented managerial troubles last season inevitably took their toll, and their blue-shirted foes promptly romped away with the honours again. This term, however, Celtic seem a much more cohesive side, thanks largely to the managerial know-how of new boss Martin O'Neill. Chris Sutton (left), O'Neill's first signing, seems to have settled in well, too: the former Blackburn Rovers marksman moved north of the border after an unhappy spell at Chelsea and has formed a productive partnership with Swedish hot-shot Henrik Larsson. A measure of Celtic's new determination was reflected in their 6-2 stuffing of Rangers back in August (they only managed to salvage a point in their four league meetings with Dick Advocaat's side last season), with Sutton and Larsson netting two goals each. It proved to be the Gers' only defeat in their first eight games and they'll be anxious to redress the balance when they play host to Celtic this Sunday.

A decade of stopping shots (and sometimes not)

As ITV2 embarks on its epic celebration of the Nineties, Neil Martin asks heroic shot-stopper David Seaman about his own hits and misses of the decade.

David Seaman spent the last ten years at the very top of his profession as England and Arsenal goalkeeper – although there were tears as well as cheers for the burly Yorkshireman. He won two League Championships, two FA Cups, the Coca-Cola Cup and European Cup Winners' Cup with Arsenal during the decade and was a regular in the international team.

'The highs through the decade are obviously winning trophies and as far as that goes, completing the League and FA Cup double in 1998 with Arsenal is very special.

'The match against Scotland in Euro 96 was also great because I saved an important penalty, it was a key moment in a big game, it was at Wembley and especially because it was against the Scots!'

There was heartbreak, too, and Seaman admits the defeat on penalties to Germany in the semi-final of Euro 96 was one of the hardest to take, but recalls an Arsenal game as his lowest moment. With just seconds left of the 1995 European Cup Winners' Cup final against Real Zaragoza, Nayim scored the only goal of the game as he lobbed Seaman from 50 yards.

'The lows are knowing that in a game you can make loads of saves and a minute later be the biggest villain of the lot.

'But that's the life of a goalkeeper and that's always going to happen.'

Eight hours on a mattress doesn't have to be a nightmare

Not only is the TEMPUR® mattress a first class ticket to a deep and restful night's sleep, its benefits to your health are long and lasting:

- Relieves back pain and aching joints
- Can help relieve arthritic and rheumatic conditions
- Reduces stress and gives better quality sleep
- Superior comfort to pocket spring or latex mattresses
- Relieves sciatic pain
- Hypo-allergenic
- Gives pressure relief

TEMPUR® - the material that moulds to your body

We spend about a third of our lives asleep, and yet how many of us invest properly in revitalising our bodies during that time?

On a TEMPUR® Mattress the nightmare of restless nights and waking stiff and unrested soon becomes a thing of the past. Unlike any other mattress, the TEMPUR® is made from a unique pressure-relieving material that truly adapts to your body rather than asking your body to conform to it.

By distributing your weight evenly, the TEMPUR® Mattress decreases pressure at trouble spots like the shoulders, hips, knees and ankles as well as giving support to the neck and back.

Clinical trials show that the TEMPUR® Mattress reduces tossing and turning during the night by 80% compared to a typical pocket spring or latex mattress - because blood flow is not restricted.

RECOMMENDED BY OVER 25,000 MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS

Over 25,000 medical professionals worldwide recommend the TEMPUR® Mattress and Neck Pillow to patients suffering from sleep difficulties, back, joint or neck pain - in fact, anyone needing a better night's sleep.

A development from the NASA Space Programme

60 NIGHT NO RISK TRIAL!

For just a 10% deposit you can try the TEMPUR Mattress in your own home for 60 nights. If, at the end of that period the TEMPUR® hasn't made a lasting impression on your well-being, we will refund your deposit. You have nothing to lose but restless sleep!

LAST OF THE SUMMER WINE

A beautifully detailed, hand-painted sculpture from Jane Hart

Balancing precariously on top of the wall and using a clothes-line pole, Compo tries the art of tightrope walking. Clegg can't bear to look and Truly stares on in amazement. Nora Batty is not impressed and fends him off with a shake of her trusty old broom!

Celebrating a comedy classic

Now master sculptor Jane Hart pays tribute to the long-running BBC comedy – Last of the Summer Wine, created by Roy Clarke. Her superb, hand-painted sculpture brings to life a favourite scene – featuring some of the well-loved characters who have entertained the nation for over 25 years...

Cautiously, Compo tries the art of tightrope walking.

You can almost hear Nora Batty crying, "Go Away! Go Away!" Look closely...and you'll spot Howard and Marina enjoying a romantic dalliance under the trees on the riverbank. And as lovable old Compo tries yet another daft prank, you know it's just a typical day in Summer Wine country!

Perfect in every detail

Every time you look, you'll find something new to enjoy...there's Nora's washing flapping in the breeze...a blanket airing from an upstairs window...colourful summer flowers...those familiar doors and windows and, of course, that famous flight of steps!

Imagine the tiny brushes and steady hand required to meticulously hand-paint the individual bricks and roof tiles, the blossom and leaves, and the rippling river. All in true-to-life colours!

Officially authorised by the BBC each sculpture is impressed with Jane Hart's signature and accompanied by a serially-numbered Certificate of Authenticity.

Fully guaranteed

Last of the Summer Wine can be yours for just £39.90, payable in two monthly instalments of just £19.95 (plus postage and handling). This represents remarkable value for a hand-painted sculpture by Jane Hart. There is no risk. If you're not totally delighted with Last of the Summer Wine, you may return your sculpture within 30 days for a replacement or full refund.

ANIME MANIA

I CAN'T describe how pleased I was to hear about Sci-Fi's week of Japanese anime films during the summer holidays. I was literally over the moon. I am a manga cartoon lover, and could not wait for the long-awaited week of pleasure. Sadly I was only able to watch two nights of films as my holiday abroad was on the exact same week! Is Sci-Fi planning another week of these films, or any anime films ever again?

Ricky Clark e-mail

● Sci-Fi responds: 'Our Anime Week was a huge success and we hope to do something similar next year. In the meantime, viewers can see an anime movie every Saturday night at midnight, with a double-bill from 10.00pm every fourth week. Plus, as a direct result of the success of Anime Week, we have extended the slot to include an anime series from Saturday 25th.'

CAN YOU HELP?

INFORMATION is urgently sought about a programme transmitted early this summer. Reference was made to a 'shell-shocked North American Indian' in Sam Shui Po prisoner of war camp in Hong Kong. Any details about the programme [sent to the Viewers' Views address] will be helpful to a Canadian Cree who was a POW in that camp.

SECOND SIGHT?

HAVING watched The Sight on Sky One, I have to congratulate the channel on brilliant programming. I sat compelled throughout. Andrew McCarthy played the part excellently. Let's hope that Sky One keeps these quality programmes rolling.

Markham Pell, e-mail

WHAT can I say about The Sight – it's brilliant, excellent and gripping stuff! I enjoyed every minute of it – please let there be more of The Sight. It's telly that's worth watching.

Sara Edge, e-mail

● The Sight was repeated on Sky One in September. It was, in fact, a pilot for a potential series, but, unfortunately, Sky has not committed to a further series.

EUROSPORT WINS GOLD!

EUROSPORT deserves a gold medal for its outstanding coverage of the Sydney 2000 Olympics. Their 24-hour coverage was top quality and they should receive an award! They did better than I have ever given them credit for – it brightened my summer.

UNCUT AND ESSENTIAL

CONGRATULATIONS to MTV for showing the completely uncensored version of Essential Dr Dre. The biography of the phenomenal rapper and producer [pictured below] was moving and informative, without being spoiled by the constant 'bleep' of blanket censorship. The programme was aired at a reasonable hour, and I hope that MTV will continue to show more programmes of a similar nature.

Jenna Shaw (15), e-mail

● MTV responds: 'We will be showing* Essential Dr Dre again, but probably not until next year. The Dr Dre show was actually part of a series of documentaries called Essential, *and other shows look into the careers of big names such as Madonna, Mel B and Robbie Williams, all of which will be shown on MTV this month.'

THE TROUBLE WITH HARRY

I AM surprised Sky can waste money employing a so-called comedian like Harry Enfield, when there are so many real comedians around. Enfield has never come over well on TV and shouldn't even be in the business. We should all be criticising companies for employing such poor-quality names as him, and others, like Alan Davies and Ben Elton, instead of encouraging them. The likes of Joe Pasquale can fill theatres, yet they hardly get a look-in on TV. How about starting a campaign to get Harry and co off the TV for good? Then British TV comedy can start to achieve the high standards it used to have.

NOT SUITABLE FOR A MATINEE?

WHY on earth did Front Row air a matinee of American Pie? Although the film is rated 15, it was classified as, and contained, occasional/strong language and frequent scenes of sex/nudity. What's even more bizarre is that The Thomas Crown Affair, which had a similar, if not milder, rating, wasn't shown during the day! I'm sure many would agree, especially parents, that American Pie isn't really suitable for daytime viewing.

Sohail Iqbal, e-mail

● Simon Hunt, Head of Marketing at Front Row, responds: 'It's always a difficult decision when choosing which film to show on the only 24-hour channel on our analogue service. We get an equal number of letters from viewers asking for more children's films as we do those requesting more 15 and 18 certificate movies during the day.* American Pie has been enormously popular with the over 15s, while The Thomas Crown Affair *is probably better suited to an older audience in the evenings.'
